By Telegram to The Freeman.
New York, Feb. 21.—Taunting the police for their inability to find him Jean Crones, the Chicago anarchist, who tried to poison Archbishop Mundelein and 300 guests at a banquet, made it known today in a telephone communication to a newspaper that he would remain in this city until Thursday.

"I had decided to go away yesterday, but I will give the good police another chance to find me," Crones declared over the telephone.

The police now believe that at least two letters sent to newspapers over Crones's signature were fakes, written by cranks.

The case of Crones is almost identical with that of I. T. T. Lincoln, the self-confessed German spy, who, after his escape from the custody of a deputy U. S. Marshal, until his capture Saturday night sent notes to newspapers, referring in an insolent manner to the inability of the authorities to locate him.

Federal agents as well as the entire police and detective forces of the city are engaged in a fine tooth search for Crones. The following description of him is being posted all over the city:

"Twenty-four years old; five feet seven inches in height; weight 150 pounds; dark hair, high cheekbones; continually smiles when talking and speaks with a German accent."

AGRICULTURAL CONTESTS IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Plans Made at Conference on Saturday P. M. Continuing Work in 1916

—Agricultural and Home-Making Work to be Credited by Regents.

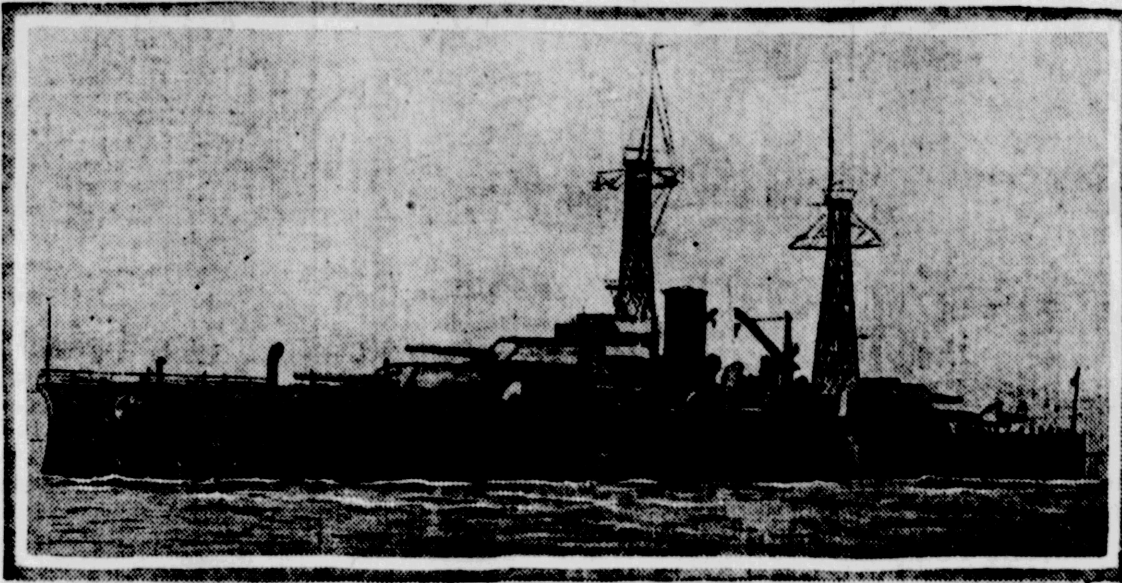

The arctic breezes that coquetted with those brave enough to visit the high school on Saturday afternoon made the object of that visit, a conference on agricultural contests in rural schools, seems almost an absurdity. However Superintendent Emily S. Burnett of District No. 1; Gillette of District No. 2; Schoonmaker of District No. 3; and Andrews of No. 4, proved their advocacy of "preparedness," of one sort at least, by their presence at the conference. Others present were Mr. Harris, representing Ellenville schools, Mr. Taylor of Marlborough, Mr. Walker of Cottekill, Superintendent Michael, a few high school teachers; representatives from the Ulster Garden, Club, and a few others interested in the subject. Having originated the plan of this gathering to discuss the results of last year's agricultural school efforts, etc., Manager Hook of the Farm Bureau, opened the meeting, and then while he went in search of the out-of-town speakers, arriving on trains, the district superintendents held a more or less formal symposium. Superintendent Andrews being chosen chairman, and Miss Burnett secretary. The general subject up for consideration was that of ways and means of conducting, this year, in the various districts, agricultural contests, similar to those of last year.

After considerable illuminating discussion, it was voted that the school contests along agricultural lines should be carried on by townships, the same as last year. The question as to the advisability of offering a special prize for girls for certain home-making activities, was also carefully considered and it was finally decided that for this year, at least, with the entire movement yet in its infancy, only one set of prizes and that for either boys or girls would be offered for agricultural work. The question which called forth the largest amount of discussion was that of the amount of the prizes, their nature, etc. Superintendent Michael during this discussion asked what the effect of the money prizes had upon the pupils, and his question brought out the fact that while the children worked enthusiastically for the first prize, those who received "blue ribbon" awards, seemed almost equally pleased with those receiving second or third prizes the one object most appreciated by the children, being recognition, and that their nature of efforts, rather than the monetary return. Then the fairness of the townships offering more prizes money or otherwise, than other townships, was questioned. As a result of all this discussion, it was finally voted that the minimum amount to be given by a township for school prizes for agricultural work and products, should be $10; that $10 to be divided into $5 for a first prize; $2 for a second prize; $1 for each of three third prizes. It was further voted that in no case should a first prize exceed $5, though the number of lesser prizes might be increased at the will of the township or interested friends. One other matter decided was that the rules of the contest, the records, etc., should be according to the Cornell Leaflets, as last year.

On the return of Mr. Hook with the speakers, Miss Claribel Nye from the rural educational department of Cornell, and Prof. L. S. Hawkins of the agricultural division of the State Department of Education, the prize question was again opened for discussion. While the original decision was not altered, but out-of-town speakers, the Ulster Garden Club, which did such efficient work with children's gardens in Kingston last year, and Mr. Hook, voiced the opinion, founded upon facts, that more prizes bespeaking appreciation of effort, rather than monetary value, exercised the more beneficial influence over the contestants.

Mr. Hook briefly spoke on the Farm Bureau plan or project to interest young men from the age of 16 to 21, who have left school and should be interested in agricultural work. For such there will be an acre contest in corn raising, with a $6, $3, $2 and $1 prize and this contest will be entirely under the supervision of Mr. Hook. But it would be impossible to conduct the tent caterpillar contest according to last year's plan. While prizes will be awarded children, both in the county and city, for the collection of these egg masses, preferably to be counted, rather than measured, they will not be brought to the Farm Bureau office but the matter of this phase of the contest will be left with Mr. Hook. All of the superintendents were quite willing that their teachers should aid in the counting of the egg masses, if that would be the best plan. Here the prizes will be monetary, yet while the community is decidedly the gainer by the removal of these pests—a special plea was put up for contestants in the city—it will be found, as last year, that the children gain far more in way of nature study of the right sort, and in quick, accurate and keen observation than can be measured by any monetary standard.

Prof. Hawkins was then introduced and told how this new educational movement would fit in with our present educational system, thus

TWO VETERANS VISIT RICHMOND

Changes in 50 Years Following the Civil War Reviewed by V. D. Lake and E. J. Nichols on Their Recent Trip.

Our desire to again visit the old historic city of Richmond, Va., and surroundings so familiar to us fifty years ago grew so strong that we (Comrades V. D. Lake and E. J. Nichols) could not wait for the approach of spring or more favorable weather conditions, so we just packed our suit cases and started in the midst of winter from the old Colonial City of Kingston Tuesday, February 8, and hiked it in the direction of Richmond. On arriving at the West Shore depot we decided to board the 2:10 p. m. south bound for New York, where we had until 9:30 in the evening before leaving via Pennsylvania R. R. for Richmond. A section in a sleeper suited our needs, and after a perusal of the evening papers and social chat, turned in for the night.

Wednesday morning 8 o'clock found us in the old town. At the depot we were met by W. S. Green, a former resident of Kingston, who took us in charge and being a close observer, had during his two years' residence gained an extensive knowledge of the city and the many places of interest, and who aided us materially in our desire to see and learn all we could.

Upon our arrival at Mr. Green's office it was our good fortune to meet and were introduced to a Mr. Phillips, who learning that we were from the north, very kindly proffered us the use of his car. Promptly at 2 p. m., as previously arranged, we started upon a tour of inspection. Mr. Phillips being thoroughly familiar with the growth and other points of interest, his explanations were exceedingly interesting and instructive, and you can imagine we saw in the 3 1/2 hours' auto ride some portion of the old town we so much longed to see, and only through the courtesy of this new made acquaintance, Mr. Phillips, were we enabled to realize the hope and desire of our mind and heart.

Virginia, the home of many distinguished men, whose memory is cherished in the hearts of the people and perpetuated in bronze and granite statuary, are not only pleasing to the eye, but instructive as to their character and manner of distinguishing their public usefulness. Many beautiful monuments are in and around the capital square.

Monumental avenue is the exclusive residential part of the city, has broad driveways, divided by beautiful parkways and the Jean Davis and R. E. Lee and other noted men whose monuments grace and line the avenue.

We visited St. John's Church, 25th and Broad streets. It is a place of much interest, where in 1775 convention met in which Patrick Henry made his famous speech and sounded the key note of American liberty when he said: "Give me liberty or give me death," is always open to visitors.

Among the most noted churches in Richmond is Monumental Episcopal Church, on Broad street, below 12th. It was in process of building in 1812, 1813, 1814, when it was completed. It is built on what was saved 116 years ago at Theater Square. Richmond's first theater was built in 1786. In that building the convention met that ratified the constitution of the United States. The building was destroyed by fire in 1892. A new one soon arose. This second building was burned December 26, 1911.

A play, "The Bleeding Nun," was being played and a large crowd was present. Among others was Francis M. Hugo will speak on "Citizenship." Pastor Snyder will speak on "National Defense." While in Albany he will also pay his respects to Governor Whitman.

In the capital, among the products of the farm exhibits, is a sealed can of watermelon rind (which deserves special mention). Delft carved are sheep, calves, swine, horses, cattle, fowls, etc. Contributed by the Rev. D. J. Traynham, who with one other member of their company, survived that famous Picket charge at Gettysburg. Up to this time he had been a careless, Godless man and now realizing the awful slaughter of his comrades and wondering how he escaped and argued that God must have spared him for some purpose and then sincerely promised to do the will of God, and after military service he prepared himself for the Christian ministry and is still in the ministry.

The Jeff Davis mansion, or "the White House of the Confederacy," is now used as a museum, where many and varied relics are stored.

The military clothing of Gen. R. E. Lee are among the relics, as also J. E. B. Stuart's; even to the boots worn in service, saddle, bridle, spurs and personal trinkets. The court, or yard, is surrounded by a high iron fence; in the court is the anchor chain from the old Cumberland, U. S. Navy, and also the great iron shaft of the Merrimac, C. S. Navy.

The following will show that prejudice and sectional feeling no longer exist in Virginia.

Upon being introduced to a Confederate veteran by Mr. Green, who said we were from the north and veterans of the war, the gentleman with a merry twinkle of the eye, remarked, "Oh you are the fellows we run out from here some 50 years ago." "Yes," I remarked, "it was a trial of speed, and we found you could outrun us."

We met a number of Confederate vets, who seemed so pleased to chat with us, and ready to confer any favor. One in particular of interest who had been guard at Libby Prison and on guard the night the escapee Union prisoners effected their escape through the tunnel dug by the prisoners. It was our intention to visit the Confederate Soldiers' Home, but the weather turned cold and we were obliged to give it up.

The weather from Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday was ideal—Saturday it was 80 degrees at noon. Sunday it had declined to 15 degrees above, and on Monday was 2 above. That's some cold for that section.

While at the capital we attended a morning session of the legislature; a bill to regulate automobile traffic was under consideration. It was proposed that the driver of a car approaching a horse vehicle, seeing the horse was inclined to be frightened, should stop and the driver of the auto get out and lead the horse past the car. A member opposing said: "Gentlemen, imagine if you please, a young lady driving a car, a horse vehicle approaching driven by a nigger, the horse pricking up his ears; how would it look to compel the lady to stop her car, to lead that nigger's horse by?" You can imagine the result.

On the heights where the old 26th Regiment were encamped, overlooking Thicket Valley, during their stay in Richmond, are located great machine shops and the home of mechanics, that section having grown rapidly. We saw a city, 50 years ago in partial ruins, streets cluttered with debris and in a fearfully unhygienic condition, with a population of 30,000, grown to a population of 180,000 live, active, enterprising people and today is a thoroughly modernized city, destined to grow and increase in importance as the great feeder to the south.

GUADAGNOLO OUT ON $5,000 BAIL

Application to admit Charles Guadagnolo to bail was made to Judge Hasbrouck at supreme court chambers Saturday afternoon by City Judge William D. Brinnier, Jr., one of his counsel, and was opposed by Assistant District Attorney J. Depuy Hasbrouck.

Judge Hasbrouck took the testimony given at the hearing before Justice of the Peace Chidester at Saugerties, when Guadagnolo was arraigned before him for shooting Charles Baxter, in his saloon opposite the Saugerties railroad station, and reserved decision.

This morning Judge Hasbrouck decided to admit Guadagnolo to bail, which was fixed at the sum of $5,000. The bond of Guadagnolo, with Joseph Mayone of Glasco and Frank Wadagnolo of Catskill as sureties, was approved. Mayor Canfield represented Guadagnolo and Assistant District Attorney Hasbrouck appeared for The People.

Guadagnolo, one of the sureties, is an uncle of Charles Guadagnolo, the defendant, but the different spelling of his name is the result of a mistake on the part of the clerk who made out his application for citizenship. The name in the application was written as if spelled Wadagnolo, and he was admitted to citizenship under that name.

Guadagnolo left town on the 11:14 o'clock West Shore train for his saloon at Saugerties. His father, Frank Guadagnolo, of this city said he intended to go to Saugerties this afternoon. There was no intimation on the part of either Charles Guadagnolo or his father whether the son would continue to keep a revolver in his saloon.

DEAD ELEVEN DAYS IN DESERTED HOUSE

Body of John F. Dreher Found on Sunday in Kitchen of House in Sleighsburg of Which He was Only Occupant.

The body of John F. Dreher was found Sunday morning on the kitchen floor of his home in Sleighsburg after it had lain there for eleven days. When found the body was frozen stiff and had been horribly mutilated about the face by rats. Dreher was 66 years old and had been employed at the Brewster powder plant at Port Ewen. Coroner E. A. Kelly who took charge of the remains stated the cause of death as apoplexy. The body was shipped this morning to Butler, N. J., for funeral and interment.

Mr. Dreher came to Sleighsburg about a year and a half ago and secured work at the powder plant. He rented rooms in the house of Mrs. Harriet Houghtaling on the Sleighsburg road near the top of the hill. He resided there alone.

Sunday morning several neighbors remarked that they had not seen Dreher around lately and Isaac Sleigh walked up to the house and tried the door and found it locked. He then glanced through the kitchen window and saw the body lying on the floor. Coroner Kelly was immediately notified and removed the body to his undertaking parlors on West Union street.

The coroner also made an investigation and was led to believe that Dreher had died on the ninth of the month from the fact that the daily papers left by a newsboy lay on the front porch while the paper dated the ninth was inside the house. It is thought that Dreher, who was fully dressed when found, had gone out in the kitchen when attacked by a stroke of apoplexy and had fallen.

The kitchen fire had burned out and the intense cold of the past few days had frozen the body which had prevented decomposition. The rats had attacked the body and both ears were chewed cleanly off while the lower lip and other parts of the face were gnawed. The fingers of the hands were also chewed off.

All of the superintendents were quite willing that their teachers should aid in the counting of the egg masses, if that would be the best plan. Here the prizes will be monetary, yet while the community is decidedly the gainer by the removal of these pests—a special plea was put up for contestants in the city—it will be found, as last year, that the children gain far more in way of nature study of the right sort, and in quick, accurate and keen observation than can be measured by any monetary standard.

Prof. Hawkins was then introduced and told how this new educational movement would fit in with our present educational system, thus proving that it has the recognition of the state, not as a fact but as an integral part of the child's education. Hereafter agricultural and home-making work will be given a value in regents' credits. For a certain amount of work done either at home or at the school ("laboratory" work, so to speak) the pupil will be given so many regents' credits. The plan is to forward to each teacher, once a month, her own lesson, together with instruction for the pupils. This will, in the agricultural work, deal with the type of crops to be planted; successive plantings, etc. etc. During the summer, the children will also receive leaflet instruction, monthly, from the educational department, and it is hoped that the district superintendents will act as general inspectors during the summer time. Furthermore, each child will be given a sort of journal or day book, in which to keep a record of the amount of time spent in labor at a specified sum in order to estimate the value of the matured product; time of planting; cost of seed, fertilizer, etc., together with a summarization of the entire year's work. Thus far these various "projects," as they will be called, are limited to gardening; raising of poultry; potatoes, corn; pigs; dairy work; sewing and cooking.

Miss Nye, of the State Home Economics Department, juniors, also had many practical suggestions to offer the superintendents and teachers, though she was the last speaker.

First lunch at the rural school, and then the desirability of having something hot for the children, to supplement their cold lunches. Cream soups, cocoa, puddings, eggs, baked potatoes, were all mentioned as wholesome, and easily prepared. In fact Miss Nye said that the problem of equipment as well as supplies was far less difficult of solving than was often considered. Frequently the few necessary utensils, and a small oil stove, not in use in winter at some home, would be loaned, and the supplies were usually provided by different groups or individual children at different times, making no serious demand upon any. If the hot dish was added to the cold lunch, and the children all gathered to eat that lunch at one time, under the teacher's supervision, thus preventing the childish liberty from restraint which usually resulted in cake or pastry for the first course, a vast deal could be accomplished for the upbuilding of strong, healthy and therefore efficient men and women.

Miss Nye also strongly advocated school fairs, as promoters of interest, not only on the part of pupils and teachers, but also on the part of parents. As for any ill-feeling resulting from the losers in the contests, Miss Nye expressed the opinion that one of the most valuable lessons of the contests was that of learning to be a good loser, which every human being must be at some time in his or her life. However, in judging of any product, whether bread or beans, the speaker thought that the contestants should be present when their various products were judged, and then it should be made plain why the one was better than the other.

Miss Nye closed, with giving a bread test, having with her a loaf of baker's bread, which she cut and judged in various ways, deciding that if the loaf had been presented by a pupil it would have been given a marking of about 82 per cent, a pretty good average for baker's bread. This brought the conference to a close.

At the close of the conference, the trial of Frank Schermerhorn, 13 years old, accused of shooting Abie Bacharach, with a twenty-two calibre Flobert .n.e. was adjourned by Recorder Lang for two weeks to await the outcome of Bacharach's injuries. The boy is under $1,000 bail bond furnished by his father, Nicholas Schermerhorn, and the recorder continued the bail.

Bacharach's condition was reported about the same this morning at the Beneficent Sanitarium, where he was convalescing after shooting.

TWO VETERANS VISIT RICHMOND

Changes in 50 Years Following the Civil War Reviewed by V. D. Lake and E. J. Nichols on Their Recent Trip.

Our desire to again visit the old historic city of Richmond, Va., and surroundings so familiar to us fifty years ago grew so strong that we (Comrades V. D. Lake and E. J. Nichols) could not wait for the approach of spring or more favorable weather conditions, so we just packed our suit cases and started in the midst of winter from the old Colonial City of Kingston Tuesday, February 8, and hiked it in the direction of Richmond. On arriving at the West Shore depot we decided to board the 2:10 p. m. south bound for New York, where we had until 9:30 in the evening before leaving via Pennsylvania R. R. for Richmond. A section in a sleeper suited our needs, and after a perusal of the evening paper and social chat, turned in for the night.

Wednesday morning 8 o'clock found us in the old town. At the depot we were met by W. S. Green, a former resident of Kingston, who took us in charge and being a close observer, had during his two years' residence gained an extensive knowledge of the city and the many places of interest, and who aided us materially in our desire to see and learn all we could.

Upon our arrival at Mr. Green's office it was our good fortune to meet and were introduced to a Mr. Phillips, who learning that we were from the north, very kindly proffered the use of his car. Promptly at 2 p. m., as previously arranged, we started upon a tour of inspection.

Mr. Phillips being thoroughly familiar with the growth and other points of interest, his explanations were exceedingly interesting and instructive, and you can imagine we saw in the 3½ hours' auto ride some portion of the old town so much longed to see, and only through the courtesy of this new made acquaintance, Mr. Phillips, were we enabled to realize the hope and desire of our mind and heart.

Virginia, the home of many distinguished men, whose memory is cherished in the hearts of the people and perpetuated in bronze and granite statuary, are not only pleasing to the eye, but instructive as to their character and manner of distinguishing their public usefulness. Many beautiful monuments are in and around the capital square.

Monumental avenue is the exclusive residential part of the city, has broad driveways divided by beautiful parkways and the Jean Davis and R. E. Lee and other noted men whose monuments grace and line the way.

We visited St. John's Church, 25th and Broad streets. It is a place of much interest, where in 1775, a convention met, in which Patrick Henry made his famous speech and sounded the key note of American liberty when he said: "Give me liberty or give me death," is always open to visitors.

Among the most noted churches in Richmond is Monumental Episcopal Church, on Broad street, below 12th. It was in process of building in 1812, 1813, 1814, when it was completed. It is built on what was called 116 years ago "Theater Square." Richmond's first theater was built in 1786. In that building the convention met that ratified the constitution of the United States. The building was destroyed by fire in 1802. A new one soon arose. This second building was burned December 26, 1811.

A play, the "Bleeding Nun," was being played and a large crowd was in attendance. Among others was the governor, who perished with 72 others in the flames. Among the communicants of this church was Chief Justice John Marshall. His pew is open to the public and is marked "John Marshall, 1814."

In the capitol, among the products of the farm exhibits, is a sealed can of watermelon rind (which deserves special mention). Defily carved are sheep, calves, swine, horses, cattle, fowls, etc. Contributed by the Rev. D. J. Traynham, who with one other member of their company, survived that famous Picket charge at Gettysburg. Up to this time he had been a careless, Godless man and now realizing the awful slaughter of his comrades and wondering how he escaped and argued that God must have spared him for some purpose and then sincerely promised to do the will of God, and after military service he prepared himself for the Christian ministry and is still in the ministry.

The Jeff Davis mansion, or "The White House of the Confederacy," is now used as a museum, where many and varied relics are stored. The military clothing of Gen. R. E. Lee are among the relics, as also J. E. B. Stuart's; even to the boots worn in service, saddle, bridle, spurs and personal trinkets. The court, or farm, is surrounded by a high iron fence; on the court is the anchor chain from the old Cumberland, U. S. Navy, and also the great iron shaft of the Merrimac, C. S. Navy.

The following will show that prejudice and sectional feeling no longer exist in Virginia. Upon being introduced to a Confederate veteran by Mr. Green, who said we were from the north and veterans of the war, the gentleman with a merry twinkle of the eye, remarked, "Oh, you are the fellows we run out from here some 50 years ago." "Yes," I remarked, "it was a trial of speed, and we found you could outrun us."

We met a number of Confederate vets, who seemed so pleased to chat with us, and ready to confer any favor. One in particular of interest, was an old man, about 70 years of age, and was on guard the night so many Union prisoners effected their escape through the tunnel dug by the prisoners. It was our intention to visit the Confederate Soldiers' Home, but the weather turned cold and we were obliged to give it up.

The weather from Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday was ideal—Saturday it was 80 degrees at noon. Sunday it had declined to 15 degrees above, and on Monday was 2 above. That's some cold for that section.

While at the capitol we attended a morning session of the legislature; a bill to regulate automobile traffic was under consideration. It was proposed that the driver of a car approaching a horse vehicle, seeing the horse was inclined to be frightened, should stop and the driver of the auto get out and lead the horse past the car. A member opposing said: "Gentlemen, imagine if you please, a young lady driving a car, a horse vehicle approaching driven by a nigger, the horse pricking up his ears; how could it look to compel the lady to stop her car, to lead that nigger's horse by?" You can imagine the result. Amendment lost.

On the heights where the old 20th Regiment were encamped, overlooking Thicket Valley, during their stay in Richmond, are located great machine shops and the home of mechanics, that section having grown rapidly. We saw a city, 50 years ago in partial ruins, streets cluttered with debris and in a fearfully unsanitary condition, with a population of 30,000 live, active, enterprising people and today is a thoroughly modernized city, destined to grow and increase in importance as the great feeder to the south.

GUADAGNOLO OUT ON $5,000 BAIL

Application to admit Charles Guadagnolo to bail was made to Judge Hasbrouck at supreme court chambers Saturday afternoon by City Judge William D. Brinnier, Jr., one of his counsel, and was opposed by Assistant District Attorney J. Depuy Hasbrouck.

Judge Hasbrouck took the testimony given at the hearing before Justice of the Peace Childster of Saugerties, when Guadagnolo was arraigned before him for shooting Charles Baxter, in his saloon opposite the Saugerties railroad station, and reserved decision.

This morning Judge Hasbrouck decided to admit Guadagnolo to bail, which was fixed at the sum of $5,000. The bond of Guadagnolo, with Joseph Mayone of Glasco and Frank Wadagnolo of Catskill as sureties, was approved. Mayor Canfield represented Guadagnolo and Assistant District Attorney Hasbrouck appeared for The People.

Wadagnolo, one of the sureties, is an uncle of Charles Guadagnolo, the defendant, but the different spelling of his name is the result of a mistake on the part of the clerk who made out his application for citizenship. The name in the application was written as if spelled Wadagnolo, and he was admitted to citizenship under that name.

Guadagnolo left town on the 11:14 o'clock West Shore train for his saloon at Saugerties. His father, Frank Guadagnolo, of this city said he intended to go to Saugerties this afternoon. There was no information on the part of either Charles Guadagnolo or his father whether the son would continue to keep a revolver in his saloon.

DEAD ELEVEN DAYS IN DESERTED HOUSE

Body of John F. Dreher Found on Sunday in Kitchen of House in Sleightsburg of Which He was Only Occupant.

The body of John F. Dreher was found Sunday morning on the kitchen floor of his home in Sleightsburg after it had lain there for eleven days. When found the body was frozen stiff and had been horribly mutilated about the face by rats. Dreher was 66 years old and had been employed at the Brewster powder plant at Port Ewen. Coroner E. A. Kelly who took charge of the remains stated the cause of death as apoplexy. The body was shipped this morning to Butler, N. J., for funeral and interment.

Mr. Dreher came to Sleightsburg about a year and a half ago and secured work at the powder plant. He rented rooms in the house of Mrs. Harriet Houghtaling on the Sleightsburg road near the top of the hill. He resided there alone.

Sunday morning several neighbors remarked that they had not seen Dreher around lately and Isaac Sleight walked up to the house and tried the door and found it locked. He then glanced through the kitchen window and saw the body lying on the floor. Coroner Kelly was immediately notified and removed the body to his undertaking parlors on West Union street.

The coroner also made an investigation and was led to believe that Dreher had died on the ninth of the month from the fact that the daily papers left by a newsboy lay on the front porch while the paper dated the ninth was inside the house. It is thought that Dreher, who was fully dressed when found, had gone out in the kitchen when attacked by a stroke of apoplexy and had fallen.

The kitchen fire had burned out and the intense cold of the past few days had frozen the body which had prevented decomposition. The rats had attacked the body and both ears were chewed cleanly off while the lower lip and other parts of the face were gnawed. The fingers of the hands were also chewed off.

A simple omelet may be made more nourishing by adding to it just before it is folded two or three tablespoonfuls of fried corn. Escalloped corn may be used for this recipe or any left-over corn dish.

Mexican Chili Con Carne.—Take a piece of suet the size of a cup, chop fine and fry out; remove the cracklings and while hot add a pound of hamburger steak; fry brown, breaking the meat into bits. Strain one can of tomatoes into a kettle and pour the meat into it. Add a clove of garlic, or three large onions chopped, add one tablespoonful of salt, a half teaspoonful of paprika and a tablespoonful of vinegar. Cook one and a half hours, add a pint of water and a can of kidney beans. Heat ten minutes and serve hot with bread or crackers.

Apple Buns.—Core and peel a half dozen apples, steam them until tender. Make a custard of the yolks of three eggs, a pint of milk and sugar to taste. Whip the whites of the eggs, add a little lemon juice and pour over the apples. Then pour the cold yellow custard over all and serve at once. This is a delicious dish if the custard and apples are cold when served.

Cream Cheese Soup.—Boil an onion for fifteen minutes in a pint of veal stock, then strain it and return the stock to the fire. Heat a pint of milk to scalding and thicken with two tablespoonfuls of flour rubbed into two tablespoonfuls of butter. Season with salt, pepper and celery salt and add the veal stock. Stir in slowly the beaten yolks of two eggs and four tablespoonfuls of grated cheese.

Cocunut and Ginger Pudding.—Crumble a pound of stale sponge cake with a half pound of grated cocunut. Pour over this a pint of boiling, sweetened milk; stir in four eggs beaten. Butter a pudding dish and arrange pieces of preserved ginger around the sides. Pour in the pudding and steam for one and a half hours. Serve with ginger sirup for a sauce. The sirup should be warmed before pouring over the pudding.

When Tobacco Was Money. At one time slaves were adopted as the unit of value, a man's wealth being reckoned by the number of his slaves. Products of the soil have commonly passed current as money and our ancestors in Maryland and Virginia before the Revolutionary war, and even later, used tobacco as money. They passed laws making tobacco money and paid the salaries of the government officials and collected all taxes in tobacco.

STONE CRUSHING PLANT TO BE SOLD

South Rondout Concern Had $150,000 Mortgage on it Which Has Been Foreclosed—Other Matters in Special Term.

The property and stone crushing plant of the North River Stone Company at South Rondout, which has been closed down for some time, will be sold on April 10 under a judgment of foreclosure and sale granted by Judge Hasbrouck on Saturday in an action brought against the stone company for the foreclosure of the $150,000 mortgage held by the Norristown Trust Company, as trustee for bondholders. Joseph M. Fowler, on whose report the judgment was granted, was appointed referee to sell the property. The amount due on the mortgage, with interest and costs, is approximately $178,000. Everett Fowler was appointed receiver of the company a year ago and has been in charge since that time. He was unable to get any bank to advance money for receivership expenses and became personally liable for the expenses incurred. During the time the property has been in possession of the receiver, the machinery has been overhauled and repaired by the watchman, whom the receiver employed. An allowance of $30 was made to the receiver on consent of all the parties. Arthur McCausland appeared for Judge Parker, who is counsel for the Trust Company, and Mr. Fowler appeared in person.

Orders were also granted in the following cases: Jennie Hamer against Edward Shacker. Action for partition of property situated at Glasco. Judgment of partition and sale under the direction of J. DeWitt Hasbrouck as referee granted. Byron L. Davis by Arthur C. Connelly for the plaintiff, William H. Murray for the defendant.

Disposition of Other Cases.

A motion to confirm the report of the commission composed of William M. Chadbourne, Cornelius I. LeFever and J. Charles Snyder, making an award of $7,259 for parcel No. 868 to the Ulster & Delaware Bluestone Company, was held open. Judge Van Etten, counsel for the bluestone company being allowed ten days in which to file objections, and William McM. Spear, counsel for the city of New York, being allowed the same time to reply.

SENOR CAMILO BORJA
YOUNG SOUTH AMERICAN, WHO SPENT $200,000 IN LONDON, NOW PENNILESS IN U. S.

Washington, Feb. 21.—Camilo Borja, aged 29 and former Consul-General of Ecuador at London, where he spent $200,000 in two years, according to his story, has applied at the Ecuadorian Legation here for aid. He arrived in Washington penniless after having had his fare paid from Atlanta. He had worked his way from Pasadena, Cal. to Atlanta.

Upon his arrival in Washington he said: "I am shocked and grieved that the minister has not assisted me already—not so much for my own sake, for although I was consul general at London for two years I did little but run through with $200,000." Borja hesitated—"But my father was then in a position to give it to me and there was no reason I shouldn't spend any money I wanted to spend."

Then he continued, "but I feel that the legation should have helped me instantly for the sake of my family. It has done much for Ecuador and when my father died, the day of his death was declared a day of national mourning for all time—he was minister of the treasury, you know."

Borja declares that he left the consulate in London, as the result of a change in government, which swept away all of the family fortune except about $50,000 which his mother now has.

That was nearly three years ago, and since that time he has been mining in Bolivia in the state of Oruro, where he and several companions had a prospect in which he says there is a fortune.

"Several months ago," he said, "I broke my arm and in order that I might receive the proper treatment I was selected as one of two of the partners to come to this country to organize a stock company. In Pasadena the other man appropriated all of my money through a trick. In all he really got about $3,000, but I can only prove that he got $1,800."

"I could have communicated with my mother, but that would have required nearly three months, so I decided to come to Washington."

All nature feels the renovating force of winter. Only to the thoughtful eye is seen. The frost-contracted globe Draws in abundant vegetable soul, And gathers vigor for the coming year.

SAVORY DISHES.

A simple omelet may be made more nourishing by adding to it just before it is folded two or three tablespoonfuls of fried corn. Escalloped corn may be used for this recipe or any leftover corn dish.

Mexican Chili Con Carne.—Take a piece of meat the size of a cup, chop fine and fry out; remove the cracklings and while hot add a pound of hamburger steak; fry brown, breaking the meat into bits. Strain one can of tomatoes into a kettle and pour the meat into it. Add a clove of garlic, or three large onions chopped, add one tablespoonful of salt, a half teaspoonful of paprika, and a tablespoonful of vinegar. Cook one and a half hours, add a pint of water and a can of kidney beans. Heat ten minutes and serve hot with bread or crackers.

Apple Bismosse.—Core and peel a half dozen apples, steam them until tender. Make a custard of the yolks of three eggs, a pint of milk and sugar to taste. Whip the whites of the eggs, add a little lemon juice and pour over the apples. Then pour the cold yellow custard over all and serve at once. This is a delicious dish if the custard and apples are cold when served.

Cream Cheese Soup.—Boil an onion for fifteen minutes in a pint of veal stock, then strain it and return the stock to the fire. Heat a pint of milk to scalding and thicken with two tablespoonfuls of four rubbed into two tablespoonfuls of butter. Season with salt, pepper and celery salt and add the veal stock. Stir in slowly the beaten yolks of two eggs and four tablespoonfuls of grated cheese.

Cocoanut and Ginger Pudding.—Crumble a pound of stale sponge cake with a half pound of grated cocoanut. Pour over this a pint of boiling, sweetened milk; stir in four eggs beaten. Butter a pudding dish and arrange pieces of preserved ginger around the sides. Pour in the pudding and steam for one and a half hours. Serve with ginger sirup for a sauce. The sirup should be warmed before pouring over the pudding.

When Tobacco Was Money. At one time slaves were adopted as the unit of value, a man's wealth being reckoned by the number of his slaves. Products of the soil have commonly passed current as money and our ancestors in Maryland and Virginia before the Revolutionary war, and even later, used tobacco as money. They passed laws making tobacco money and paid the salaries of the government officials and collected all taxes in tobacco.

KINGSTON, N. Y., FEB. 21, 1916.

War has become so scientific that there is little scope for the personal gallantry which figured so largely in former days. No thrill comes from reading of the killing of men with big guns at a distance of a dozen miles, and the exploits of the submarines and Zeppelins arouse only a sort of dull indignation. Generals now give orders by telephone instead of charging with their troops, and the common soldier in nine cases out of ten never sees the man he slays. Having become accustomed to these conditions, the story of the capture of Erzerum seems to us like a page from an old book. Here was the most important fortress in Asia Minor, supposed to be impregnable, captured at the bayonet's point by Russian troops, who labored under the disadvantage of being compelled to climb a steep mountain covered with deep snow, while the temperature was 30 degrees below zero. There was never anything like it even in Homeric days. It was the performance of the impossible. The Turks simply knew that such a feat could not be accomplished, and therefore took no particular precautions against this form of assault. After all, most of the things worth doing are those which everybody says cannot be done.

Because there has been nothing spectacular about the methods of the Republican State Administration at Albany, many people have obtained the impression that but little progress has been made in the way of reform and economy. The error of this notion is shown by an examination of the balance sheet of the Comptroller as of January 31. This document shows that during the four months preceding the date mentioned the expenditures from the general fund were $2,324,286.25 less than during the corresponding period of last year. There was also an increase in receipts of $6,195,970.25 during the same period. Thus it will be seen that during the first third of the present fiscal year the State treasury has been able to make up for the $6,000,000 borrowed on account of the deficiency left by the Democrats, and moreover has accumulated a comfortable balance. The increase of receipts is due to a variety of causes, but the decrease in expenditures is entirely to the credit of the Administration. It would take columns to tell the whole story. One example is sufficient to indicate how methods have been changed. During 1915 Secretary of State Hugo collected $300,000 more from the automobile tax than was collected in any previous year, but the expense of doing so was $69,013 less than in 1914. In all the other departments controlled by Republicans similar things have been happening. Political bums who drew salaries but did no other work have been retired. All employees of the State have been compelled to work a reasonable number of hours a day. There is yet much to be done, and we think that the voters will see that the new policy is continued.

If it be true, as Assemblyman Welch charges, that Commissioner of Education Finley has sent out a circular letter to principals and superintendents of schools urging them to lobby against the bill providing for military training in the high schools, the act is in bad taste, not to say outrageous. The State Department of Education is the creature of the Legislature, not its boss. Its business is to take orders. If boys do not get military training in the schools they will not get it at all, at least in the vast majority of cases, and if in the future our country is forced into war it will take six or twelve months longer than would otherwise be necessary to train an army. It seems to us that Dr. Finley would be wise, from the standpoint of self-interest of himself and associates, to refrain from making his department a subject of discussion. Outside of the ranks of teachers and other employees, nobody has a word of praise for the way in which our schools are being conducted. They cost more and more, while the results they accomplish grow less and less. If the subject were thoroughly understood in our own city today and a popular vote could be taken, we are convinced by what we hear that there would be a tremendous majority in favor of refusing any longer to accept the State money which binds us to follow out the educational methods of the department. Maybe the pupils have no time to spare for military training, since they are already too busy to learn to read understandingly, spell correctly and figure accurately, but we think that a practical man with the power to do so could make time by cutting out some of the nonsense which absorbs so much effort.

FIREMEN SPILLED FROM HOSE WAGON

An automobile which backfired in the Stuyvesant Garage on Clinton Avenue at the head of Main street a few minutes before one o'clock Sunday afternoon caused an alarm of fire to be rung in from Box No. 84, corner of Albany and Clinton Avenue, and brought out Wiltwyck and Excelsior Hose Companies, the Central Hook and Ladder and Weiner Hose with the motor truck. The fire was extinguished with chemicals with slight damage.

Excelsior Hose Company, whose jumper is hauled to fires by a taxicab, met with an accident while responding to the alarm. A Kingston City trolley car ran ahead of the taxicab and jumper on Fair street from North Front to John street, where it stopped to take on passengers. The taxicab driver had intended to continue along Fair street to Main street but in order to avoid running down several passengers who were boarding the car at John street, he was compelled to swerve into John street. One of the wheels on the Excelsior hose wagon caught in the car track and was broken in making the turn, spilling three firemen who were clinging to the rear of the wagon. The snow prevented their serious injury.

HE COULD PLAY CHESS.

And He Proved That Fact in a Most Emphatic Manner.

In Austria-Hungary some years ago there was a marvelous chess player, whose name and residence were unknown, but who every now and then displayed his remarkable skill in the game. The last story of him was told by James H. Hyatt of Philadelphia, who had then just returned from Budapest.

"I was playing chess with a friend in a cafe," said Mr. Hyatt, "and plainly saw my defeat, when a little bit of a shriveled Pole with a tray of cheap jewelry stood in front of us and offered his wares in most persuasive tones. 'Go away,' I said.

"You can beat him," answered the peddler, whose attention was on the game.

"What do you know about it?" I asked.

"May I tell him?" he inquired, looking at my opponent.

"Certainly. Crack away," came the reply in a tone of assurance.

"Take his knight," said my self-appointed instructor. I did so to humor him, though I lost my queen by the operation. But, much to my surprise, I found that the very next move gave me the game.

"Let me play with you?" asked the peddler. "I mate you in the moves you say and where you say."

"If you do I will give you 10 florins," I answered. "Take the white men. Mate me on my queen's fourth square in twenty-two moves if you can."

"We started in, my friend keeping account of the moves, and moved rapidly. After about a dozen moves I had the advantage of a bishop and a pawn and was assured I would defeat my aggressive little opponent. When he let a castle go by an apparently careless play I was sure of victory. Then came a sudden change in the situation, and I had to move my king out of check. I was on the defensive and in rapid retreat.

"Twenty-two moves," said my friend as the little peddler put me again in check with his knight.

"Mate," cried my opponent as he swung his queen across the board.

"My king was on the queen's fourth square."

"I gave him 10 florins, and he walked away shaking his head and hands with infinite satisfaction."—New York Herald.

FAVORS GOLF PASTIME

Noted Twirler Says Game is Good for Baseball Players.

Helps One to Gain Absolute Control of Himself, One of Greatest Assets in Game.—Also Assists Batting Materially.

"I cannot agree with these men who say golf is bad for a ball player," says Jack Coombs of the Brooklyn Dodgers. "It helps him more than an ordinary man realizes. One of the greatest assets of the game is absolute control of oneself, in which confidence plays an important part. Thus, the mind being under control, one thinks not of the importance resting upon him. There only is one thought—succeed."

"It is true the swing in golf is far different from that used in baseball. There are few ball players, however, who do not bring that stroke of their profession into golf. If you will look back to the games I pitched for the Athletics on Mondays, you will notice from the box scores that my batting was far superior to that on other days. I played golf every Sunday, rain or shine, and as I often said to the boys: 'That ball looked as big as a pumpkin.' Whether golf playing the day before had anything to do with it or not I dare not say. Being a bug on golf, my own opinion is formed. 'Associations on the golf links are far different from those formed in other walks of life."

"During the world's series of 1910 Mr. Plank, Ed's father, came from Gettysburg to see the games. He lived with us during his visit. The afternoon before the first game against the Cubs Bender, Ed and I played golf. We came home, went to bed early, and did not wake up until

Jack Coombs.

8:30 the next morning. Upon arising, I asked Mr. Plank how he had enjoyed his rest.

"Never slept a wink," he replied. "Been up since 4:30 o'clock. Walked all over Fairmont park. Was too nervous to sleep. How could you and Ed snore so when the series begins today?"

"I had not given the importance of the baseball game a thought. I was thinking, when I went to sleep, how easily Ed and I could have beaten Bender at golf had we played with a little more confidence."

How many eggs does the ordinary hen lay in a year? What is the highest yield that it is possible to obtain by choosing only the best birds and feeding them with the greatest care?

To these questions no very definite answer can be given, though much light has been thrown on the subject in the past few years. Individual records have been made under the supervision of the agricultural colleges and laying competitions have been instituted in several of the states, in which pens of five or ten birds have been pitted against one another. From the results it is possible to draw a few conclusions.

With poultry, as with other live stock, the amateur is always asking which is the best breed. It was a dispute between the admirers of two breeds that started the first laying contest in Australia 15 years ago. An Australian poultryman who kept Buff Orpingtons was positive that his hens were better egg producers than the

Buff Orpington Cock.

Silver Wyandottes of his neighbor. A wager was made and the first trial of six months' performance was begun. Since then the contests have widened out to include all the leading breeds, yet the question of leadership has not been solved. The original claimants for the honor—the Silver Wyandottes and Buff Orpingtons—have, however, long since been outdistanced, leaving the Leghorns, the Wyandottes and the Plymouth Rocks straining for the lead. The anxiety of the amateur to know "which is the best breed" is still unsatisfied.

Leghorns and Wyandottes.

Reviewing the results of the past two years, it is seen that there is something in the strain; that is a breeder with a flock of good layers can raise from them birds that will distinguish themselves in egg production. In the Storrs' Connecticut contest, which closed a year ago, the first place was taken by a pen of White Leghorns, the property of F. P. Lincoln of that state. This year the same poultryman is well up on the list with a pen of Plymouth Rocks. In 1914, Tom Barron of Catforth, England, was in second place with White Wyandottes, and this year captured first and third prizes with Wyandottes and Leghorns, respectively. Apparently the skillful breeder can handle any one of several breeds and get results.

In the Philadelphia contest Mr. Barron has also been a consistent winner having taken first and second place in the test a year ago, and coming third in the competition just closed. Another English breeder, Ed Corn, was in third place last year and up among the leaders this year.

For the past four years an elaborate test has been carried out in Missouri, which included several of the lesser known breeds such as Anconas and Hamburgs. Comparisons were made by months. The laying season has a very direct bearing on profits seeing that winter eggs command the higher prices. Leghorns and Plymouth Rocks proved the best workers in December and January, while Orpingtons led in February. Through the summer there was little advantage, though it was noticeable that Rhode Island Reds began to show up in July and August.

Over the 200 Mark. In the individual records for Missouri pens, extending over four years, there were 249 hens or 10 per cent of the whole number of entries that laid 200 eggs or more in one year. Fourteen per cent of the hens laid less than 90 eggs in one year. The average of all the hens during the four years was 152 eggs each.

Commenting on the profit to be obtained from the good layers and the shirkers, the manager of the contest says, that at 20 cents per dozen and at an estimated cost of $1 to feed each hen a year, the hen which lays 60 eggs in a year, just pays for her feed, and estimating that it costs one-half as much for housing and labor, the hen which lays 90 eggs per year just pays her keeping. The hen which lays 100 eggs in one year makes a profit of ten eggs, while the hen which lays the sum of 120 eggs in one year makes a profit of 30 cents, and is therefore three times as profitable as the hen which lays 100 eggs. The hens which lay 200 eggs are 110 eggs profit, which would be 1.83-1.3 profit. Considering this as interest at per cent on an investment, the hen would be worth $22.91.

One of the conclusions reached by Miller Purvis, the noted poultry authority, is that the competitions have brought the egg laying hen into her proper place beside the fancy bird that wins in the show. For every dollar spent for poultry for food, at least $2 are spent for eggs. Hence, the poultryman who is looking for breeding stock will demand to be shown something in the way of accomplishment in the flock he is choosing from. Before the time of laying competitions breeders made claims concerning the prizes they had won at poultry shows; now they add to these claims the egg records of their hens, if they have the courage to put them to the test. The Oregon crossbred hen that laid 303 eggs in a year and 505 in two consecutive years has had more newspaper space used in telling about her than any other hen. Fifteen years ago a hen with the same blood mixture would have been called a mongrel and no attention would have been paid to her. Today her daughters or near female relatives have taken third place in the contest at San Francisco exposition. Further, a pen of barnyard mongrels tested in one of the competitions laid almost exactly the number of eggs that made the average of the 495 purebred hens constituting the remainder of the entries.

GREEN FEED VERY ESSENTIAL

Hens Relish Turnips, Beets, Mangels, Etc.—Sprouted Oats Probably Best for Winter.

Are you giving the layers as much grain feed as they want? If not, better see to it. Hens consume large quantities of grass and when shut up they miss this food.

Turnips, beets, mangels, rutabagas, carrots and the like are relished by the fowls. Cabbage is too. Sprouted oats is, perhaps, the best green feed, as in it the hens get both the green sprouts and the grain.

Some kind of green ration is necessary, however, if the hens are expected to lay properly during the winter months.

Green Food is Necessary. Until grass comes, the laying hen must be fed with its equivalent in the shape of cabbage, beets, sprouted oats or soaked alfalfa leaves. Without green food to supplement the grain ration, the hen will not prove profitable.

HOW TO WARD OFF DISEASES BY HAVING CLEAN HANDS.

Most epidemics of typhoid fever nowadays are ultimately traced to a single person who, either sick with the disease, or sickening with it, convalescent from it or acting as a chronic "carrier" of the germs, literally hands the infection to those who happen to be in contact with him.

But if typhoid and dysentery and cholera were the only diseases spread by unwashed hands we wouldn't say a word—we'd leave it to the health authorities. Unfortunately a lot of other diseases are peddled about in the same manner, such as diphtheria, pneumonia, sore throat and "cold" in the head, and with the exception of diphtheria and pneumonia these diseases do not interest the health authorities.

There are families where children sit at table and say grace with unwashed hands. There are other families where parents take a squirt at the children's hands and, if they discover no microbes thereon, let the youngsters sit right down and shovel in whatever contamination may have been collected through the day. Is it any wonder grandma still has occasional seeming vindication of her idea that "sugar makes worms"? Worms make worms, and children help the work along by transplanting the eggs from contaminated soil to food and from the food to their own innocent mouths.

THE MIDNIGHT SUPPERS.

How to Make Dream Cakes on Your Chafing Dish.

The easiest things in the world to make in a chafing dish are dream cakes, and everybody who likes a rare bit will rave over these toothsome dainties, which are built of cheese, cream and slices of bread. They are less trouble than the ordinary Welsh rabbit, which requires a good many ingredients and prolonged cooking, and they are "heartier" enough to make a sustaining supper after an evening of bridge. Two or at most three dream cakes will be all the average person can eat, unless he is willing to risk the possible weird dreams which are said to have given these rich delicacies their name.

Press half a pound of soft rarebit cheese through a potato curlier or a colander until you have a pile of light, flaky cheese particles. Mix with the cheese half a cupful of sweet cream. Season with a pinch of salt, paprika, a dash of mustard and a teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce. Have ready slices of bread, cut rather thick and with the crusts trimmed off. Spread one slice thickly with the cheese, another slice down upon it and then brown the sandwich thus made in a chafing dish brazier in which butter is bubbling. When golden brown and crisp serve piping hot on a small plate. Do not have the sandwiches too large; small ones will brown more quickly. Ordinary slices of bread, trimmed at the edges, may be cut in two diagonally to make three cornered dream cakes.

How to Teach Children the Great Law of Cause and Effect.

Children should be taught from the beginning the great moral law of cause and effect, not to look for wealth without work, for honor without honesty. Teach them that character stands above surroundings and that esteem should be bestowed where it is due, whether for mental endowment or material wealth.

It is not all of morals to moralize, and less-precept and more example is to be commended. The living realization, the quiet suggestion, the favorable opportunity, are the efficient teachers. Ignorance is responsible for a great deal of wickedness, but evil example and parental neglect are responsible for vastly more.

A sense of right and wrong should be cultivated early in a child's life, and much may be accomplished in this direction before the child leaves the mother's nursery training.

How to Case Harden Iron Utensils When They Are Quite New.

Make up a paste of powdered prussiate of potash and water. Coat the iron with this paste and set it aside to dry. Let the forge fire be clear and bright. When the paste is dry upon the iron thrust the iron into the fire until it is cherry red. Keep it at this heat for a few minutes and then take it out. Plunge it into cold water, and it will be found converted into steel at the surface.—Popular Science Monthly.

How to Sew Buttons on Children's Clothes For Permanency.

When you sew buttons on the children's dresses run a tape down the wrong side first. If each button is sewed through to the tape no amount of hard wear or abuse in the laundry will tear it from the goods. Another wise precaution is to use linen thread for the buttons on your boy's suit.

How to Add Life to Candles During the Long Evenings.

With the shorter days here candles are being used more and more for dinner. If the candles are given a coat of colorless varnish and allowed to dry thoroughly before lighting they will not only last longer, but the varnish will prevent the wax melting and running down.

AUTOMOBILE NOTES.

Peter J. Brophy, a machinist well known in this city and many years experience in the auto business, has opened a garage on Van Deusen street for repairing and adjusting automobiles. He has been connected with Van's Garage and has been employed in different auto factories in this state.

In consideration of the bad condition of the roads, a good record was made by a Cadillac car of the Ulster garage on Fair street, which covered the distance from here to New York city in five hours Friday, Joseph Bennett driving the remaining four movie actors of the Universal Film Company, who had been in town a week. The other members of the company left a few days before. This car has traveled 7,200 miles over all kinds of roads and in every condition of the weather. It is a 1912 model.

The unsuccessful Ford peace pilgrimage has affected the sale of the cars in this district not in the least as shown by the following recent sales by James Millard and Son, local agents: delivery car to Herbert Carl Dry Goods Company, runabout to Everett and Treadwell, delivery car to Charles Spalt, delivery car to C. V. Hogan, and three cars to the New York Telephone Company with special bodies for line construction work. Touring cars have been sold to Dr. Gillette, Henry Woolsey, Ephraim Burke, William C. Dutton, and a runabout to Arthur Oliver.

Middletown's auto show ended Saturday night and the press of that town states that it was a great success. The show lasted four days and was open from 1 p. m. until 12 o'clock midnight each day. It was held in the state armory and dancing was enjoyed each evening from 9:30 to 12. Free movies were also provided as a drawing card. The dealers claim to have had $100,000 worth of cars and accessories on exhibition. If the number of cars on display is a factor by which success may be judged, Kingston will outdo their neighboring inland city. The Middletown show exhibited 30 cars while space has been drawn for 50 autos at the Kingston show. The autos displayed at Middletown were the Auto-Car (trucks), Buick, Brockway (trucks), Case, Cadillac, Chevrolet, Chandler, Dodge Brothers, Ford, Hudson, Hupmobile, International Harvester Company (trucks), Interstate, Metz, Moon, Mitchell, Maxwell, National, Oakland, Overland Oldsmobile, Reo, Studebaker, Stearns-Knight, Scripps-Booth, Viole, Twombly, and Willys-Knight. Fifteen exhibitors displayed accessories and electrical appliances.

Rock Composed of Minute Fossils.

Near Reno, Nev., are peculiar beds of diatomaceous earth. This chalk white material consists largely of fossil microscopic animals called diatoms. These remains have collected here in numbers so immense as to form deposits hundreds of feet thick and in places make up almost the entire mass of the rock. It is so light that it will almost float on water.

Results of Cander. Cander is a delightful thing. A Glasgow magistrate in the marine police court got a staggering example of it the other day when he demurred at giving a prisoner an extension of time to help the payment of a fine. The prisoner was indignant at the refusal. "For 50 years past," he declared, "I've paid my fines regularly, and I think I'm entitled to a little consideration!" He got it!

Seventy Lakes. The Uinta mountains of Utah, included within the Wasatch, Uinta and Ashley national forests, should become a favorite recreation region because of the many small lakes within depressions scooped out by glacial drifts. Easy When Divided. Four Connaught men en route for the up-country harvest assembled at a certain point and were considering the length of the road they must travel in order to reach the desired place. It was estimated at 40 miles. "Come on," said one encouragingly. "What signifies 40 miles among four of us?"

MEXICAN MANNIKIN

AMERICAN MANNIKIN 2,000 YEARS OLD DISCOVERED. Here is the oldest American antique known, a stone mannikin dating from 100 B. C., and found by a Mexican peon ploughing his fields in the district of San Andres, Tuxtla. It is of conical shape, in jade or nephrite, about six and a half inches in height and three and three-quarter inches in diameter at the base. On it are carved the glyphs or symbolical figures which were the writing of the ancient Mexicans, and by means of which they recorded in stone the history of their race and achievements. But they give no clue to what this figure represents. With the upper part of the head of a man, it combines the bill of a bird and wings cover its sides. It is an idol probably of these ancient people whose forms of worship are still unknown.

STONE CRUSHING PLANT TO BE SOLD

South Rondout Concern Had $150,000 Mortgage on it Which Has Been Foreclosed---Other Matters in Special Term.

The property and stone crushing plant of the North River Stone Company at South Rondout, which has been closed down for some time, will be sold on April 10 under a judgment of foreclosure and sale granted by Judge Hasbrouck on Saturday in an action brought against the stone company for the foreclosure of the $150,000 mortgage held by the Norristown Trust Company, as trustee for bondholders. Joseph M. Fowler, on whose report the judgment was granted, was appointed referee to sell the property. The amount due on the mortgage, with interest and costs, is approximately $178,000. Everett Fowler was appointed receiver of the company a year ago and has been in charge since that time. He was unable to get any bank to advance money for receivership expenses and became personally liable for the expenses incurred. During the time the property has been in possession of the receiver, the machinery has been overhauled and repaired by the watchman, whom the receiver employed. An allowance of $1,000 was made to the receiver on consent of all the parties. Arthur McCausland appeared for Judge Parker, who is counsel for the Trust Company, and Mr. Fowler appeared in person.

Orders were also granted in the following cases: Jennie Hamer against Edward Shacker. Action for partition of property situated at Glasco. Judgment of partition and sale under the direction of J. DePuy Hasbrouck as referee granted. Byron L. Davis by Arthur C. Connelly for the plaintiff. William H. Murray for the defendant.

Disposition of Other Cases. A motion to confirm the report of the commission composed of William M. Chadbourne, Cornelius I. LeFever and J. Charles Snyder, making an award of $7,250 for parcel No. 868 to the Ulster & Delaware Bluestone Company, was held open. Judge Van Eiten, counsel for the bluestone company being allowed ten days in which to file objections, and William M. Speer, counsel for the city of New York, being allowed the same time to reply.

SENOR CAMILO DORJA
YOUNG SOUTH AMERICAN, WHO SPENT $200,000 IN LONDON, NOW PENNILESS IN U. S.

Washington, Feb. 21.—Camilo Dorja, aged 29 and former Consul-General of Ecuador at London, where he spent $200,000 in two years, according to his story, has applied at the Ecuadorian Legation here for aid. He arrived in Washington penniless after having had his fare paid from Atlanta. He had worked his way from Pasadena, Cal. to Atlanta.

Upon his arrival in Washington he said: "I am shocked and grieved that the minister has not assisted me already—not so much for my own sake, for although I was consul general at London for two years I did little but run through with $200,000." Dorja hesitated. "But my father was then in a position to give it to me and there was no reason why I should spend any money I wanted to spend."

Then he continued, "but I feel that the legation should have helped me instantly for the sake of my family. It has done much for Ecuador and when my father died, the day of his death was declared a day of national mourning for all time—he was minister of the treasury, you know."

Dorja declares that he left the consulate in London, as the result of a change in government, which swept away all of the family fortune except about $50,000 which his mother now has.

That was nearly three years ago, and since that time he has been mining in Bolivia in the state of Oruro, where he and several companions had a prospect in which he says there is a fortune.

"Several months ago," he said, "I broke my arm and in order that I might receive the proper treatment I was selected as one of two of the partners to come to this country to organize a stock company. In Pasadena the other man appropriated all of my money through a trick. He all he really got about $2,000, but I can only prove that he got $1,800."

"I could have communicated with my mother, but that would have required nearly three months, so I decided to come to Washington."

COLD SUSPENDS ICE HARVESTING

With the thermometer hovering around the zero mark and a high wind blowing the men at work harvesting ice at Kingston Point this morning were forced to stop work as the wind made it impossible to keep the canals open. Work was resumed this afternoon, however.

Sunday night and early this morning the coldest weather of the season held the city in its grip and some report that the thermometer dropped as low as ten below zero during the night. At 7:30 o'clock this morning on lower Broadway thermometers registered four below zero.

The cold spell continued throughout the day and the weather was extremely favorable to making ice.

So cold was it during the night that the channel of the Transport ferry was frozen over and it took over two hours for the ferry to plow her way through on her first trip.

Residents on the other side of the creek are walking back and forth across the ice which is over half a foot in thickness.

The work of filling the large Knickerbocker house in the creek will start Tuesday morning. The ice is 9 and 10 inches in thickness.

Lou-Tellegen Not Coming.

Shortly after closing contracts with the "King of Nowhere" in which Lou-Tellegen is getting into shape to open at the Cort theatre in New York city in a few days, the management of the company decided not to continue the one night stands but to rest up instead. It is with regret that Manager Gildersleeve announces that he cannot secure this international star for Kingston, as it is a rare treat for a company of this caliber to play here. "The Great Divide," a five part drama produced in the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, will be the photo-play which will be presented tonight instead of this play as announced Friday.

Not An Epicure.

One afternoon a sad eyed hobo rambled up the garden walk of a suburban home and meekly tapped on the back door.

"Lady," said he in a tearful voice to the woman who answered his knock, "I ain't had a thing to eat since last week. If you would only give me some bread or—"

"Mary," suddenly interjected the woman, addressing some invisible person, "bring Towser out here at once."

"All right, dear lady," said the hobo in a resigned voice; "even dog meat is better than starvin' to death."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Laughter.

Laughter begins either with the mouth or the eyes. Then come the other muscular groups, and then come the vocal expressions of laughter, such as huffs, chuckles, sniggers, snickers, giggles, snorts, grunts, foghorn rumbles, yells, shrieks, guffaws, trills, chuckles, snuffles and all sorts of peculiar bird notes and musical sounds.—Exchange.

Coroners in England.

In early times the coroner in England was a revenue officer of the crown, and his business was to find out the criminals, extort their confessions and confiscate their goods to the crown. From records it appeared that King Alfred had a predilection for hanging his coroners because they did what was unjust.

SWAYED BY THE WEATHER.

Some Persons Are Greatly Influenced by Climatic Conditions.

Weather influences on man may be roughly divided into two classes—viz, those which are direct and obvious and those which are the more or less indirect and obscure. The influences belonging to the second class have been during the past decade or so the subject of immense research.

Some persons are pronounced "meteoropaths," abnormally subject to "weather neuroses." Friedrich Nietzsche was one par excellence. Such persons, as a rule, are more specifically "cyclonopaths." The passage of cyclonic depressions accompanied by certain characteristic types of weather is reflected in their sensation and in the mode of operation of their bodily and mental functions.

The gross change of barometric pressure pertaining to a cyclone, or "low," is not in itself an important factor in producing these manifestations since it never exceeds that experienced in the ascent (without the effort of climbing) of a good sized hill. Indeed, many "lows" do not expose us to greater pressure of changes in the course of twenty-four hours than we experience in a couple of minutes in riding to the top of an average office building—Baltimore American.

A GREAT DESTROYER.

One That is Actively at Work Every Minute of the Day.

I am more powerful than the combined armies of the world. I have destroyed more men than all the wars of the world. I am more deadly than bullets, and I have wrecked more homes than the mightiest of siege guns. I steal in the United States alone more than $300,000,000 each year. I spare no one, and I find my victims among rich and poor alike.

The young and old, the strong and weak, widows and orphans, know me. I loom up to such proportions that I cast my shadows over every field of labor from the turning of the grindstone to the moving of every railroad train. I massacre thousands on thousands of wage earners in a year. I lurk in unseen places and do most of my work silently. You are warned against me, but you heed not. I am relentless.

I am everywhere, in the home, on the streets, in the factory, at railroad crossings, on the seas. I bring sickness, degradation and death, and yet few seek to avoid me. I destroy, crush or maim. I give nothing, but take all. I am your worst enemy. I am Carelessness.—Holyoke Transcript.

Nations That Left No Sign.

There are two great nations of antiquity whose inscriptions cannot yet be read—the Etruscans and the Hittites. The Etruscans occupied a part of Italy corresponding roughly to what is now known as Tuscany. The Hittites at one time occupied a part of Palestine and united with the Canaanites to resist the invasion by the Israelites under Joshua. The Etruscan and Hittite inscriptions have thus far resisted the attempts of scholars to decipher them, though no one knows when some one may stumble on a bilingual inscription which will serve as a key, just as the Rosetta stone, discovered in Egypt in 1799, served as a key to the Egyptian hieroglyphics. In the new world the so-called Maya inscriptions, found on the ruins in Yucatan, are also a puzzle to scientists.—Christian Herald.

Statesman and Politician.

A statesman knows what ought to be done and a politician does something else and gets away with it.

BRIGHTER CHILDREN

Children are probably brighter today than a generation ago—but are they stronger? That's a grave question. So many pinched faces, dulled eyes and languid feelings make us wonder if they will ever grow into robust, healthy men and women.

If your children catch colds easily, are tired when rising, lack healthy color, or find studies difficult, give them Scott's Emulsion for one month to enrich their blood and restore the body-forces to healthy action.

Scott's Emulsion is used in private schools. It is not a "patent medicine," simply a highly concentrated oil-food, without alcohol or harmful drugs. It cannot harm; it improves blood; it benefits lungs and strengthens the system. Your druggist has it—refuse substitutes. Scott & Bowne, Bloomfield, N. J. 15-21

MINSTRELS OF TRIPOLI.

Mysterious Musicians Who Flit From Place to Place at All Hours.

The strange music and mysterious musicians heard and seen in Tripoli are described by Mrs. Mabel L. Todd in her book, "Tripoli the Mysterious." "The children are possessed of wonderful mental quickness. They acquire languages without effort, and the street urchins use easily French, Italian and all the languages that are current in their narrow streets. The strange music of the city, too—the weird chants, the cymbals, flageolets and queer stringed instruments—deeply impresses the American visitor.

"Sometimes at dawn, when roofs and minarets were dazzlingly white against the sapphire sky, while yet the labyrinthine streets at the bottoms of stucco canyons lay in twilight gray, strange men from the desert would stalk by, making uncanny music.

"One of them, very tall and blacker than most, was dressed in a low necked, short sleeved garment, greatly abbreviated as to skirts, playing melodies in a minor mode unknown to the west, and his stride was full of a dignity well nigh appalling.

"The instrument slightly resembled a Scotch bagpipe decorated with barbaric strings of shells and beads, an inflated skin with a primitive mouth piece and at the opposite end two pointed projections like horns. His companion beat upon a curious little tom-tom and now and then sang a bloodcurdling chant.

"Black boys followed, jumped, shouted, danced like wild creatures, excited beyond all bounds by this oddly compelling music as the rhythm penetrated and seized their imagination. Although these men of mystery generally passed about sunrise, they sometimes went by in the night. Once or twice the weird performance took place about 2 o'clock in the morning. The minstrels always walked with peculiar swiftness, intent upon the serious business in hand."

LAYING A SPECTER.

A Filmy Blue Light and Some Daring Japanese Police.

In the village of Hase, near Kanazaki, at the end of the Rokusan range, says the Kobe Yushin, rumors were set afloat not long ago that in the small hours of the morning a phantom could be seen at the Miyama pass, where some time ago a murder was committed by robbers. The ghost, whenever he caught sight of a lonely traveler, would attempt to stop him, as if he had something important to say. People reported having seen a filmy blue light hovering in their path. In the whole village no one dared thereafter to walk that way after dark.

The rumor was laughed at by the skeptical police, but late one night a number of officers were instructed to patrol the haunted pass in the hope of bringing relief to the tortured minds of the timid by proving that there was no ghost or, should he be met, putting him under arrest. Every half hour after midnight a different policeman was to traverse the pass. Up to half past 2 nothing happened. Then one of them saw the blue light in front of him. He blew his whistle and ran—back to the police station. The others also ran—in the same direction.

When morning came the whole countryside joined the police in making search for the ghost. What they found near the scene of the blue light was a human skeleton in a long disused lime kiln. The local scientist declared that the light was a phosphorescence from the poor neglected bones, which were thereupon interred with full Buddhist ceremony at Kase, and the people as far as Kanazaki breathe easier.

Chinese Typewriters.

A Chinese typewriter is a wonderful contrivance. It has 4,200 characters. It has only three keys. It can make 50,000 letters or characters by combinations of the basic 4,200. To write a letter you turn a cylinder upon which are the 4,200 characters until the right one comes opposite the keyboard of the guide on another cylinder. After striking the printing key, just as on an American machine, you begin a still hunt for the next character which you are to print, and so on while reason lasts.—Christian Herald.

Pleasing Superiority.

"Why are there so many old jokes on the stage?"

"Oh, they go good. That is due to the feeling of superiority produced by the fact that you know the answer while the actor glibly who is being told the joke apparently does not."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Daily Bath.

Frequent bathing is conducive to good health. It keeps the pores of the skin clear, so that they can perform their proper functions, clearing the system of excretions which cannot be discharged in other ways. A brisk rub after the bath promotes circulation of the blood.

AUTO OFFERINGS

February is the month when auto bargains are plentiful, for the big garages that bought up the usable cars last fall are ready to unload them at remarkably low prices and the individual owners, who intend to buy new cars for the spring season, are ready to sell their old cars.

Think of how much pleasure your family would get out of one of these this summer and you can get one, too, for a mere song, if you ask for it by a Freeman Want Ad.

Conservation stands sentinel over the natural resources of our country, and forbids destruction of forests, mines and animal life.

Conservation multiplies the by-products of industry, and changes waste into profit. It is conservation that turns rags into miladi's dainty note paper.

It is conservation that gathers together worn-out garments, discarded sheets, carpets and similar objects which have served their useful purposes. In the General's big roofing mills, these are macerated, saturated, sterilized and beaten into pulp, which finally comes out of the rollers in one continuous sheet of clean, strong roofing felt.

It is then thoroughly saturated with the General's own blend of soft asphalt, and coated with a blend of harder asphalt, which keeps the inner saturation soft and prevents the drying-out process so destructive to the ordinary roofing. This explains why

You can identify CERTAIN-TEED Roofing by the name, which is conspicuously displayed on every roll of material. Look for this label, and be satisfied with none that doesn't show it.

Certain-teed Roofing

outlasts other roofing; also why the General can safely guarantee it for 5, 10 or 15 years, according to ply. Experience has proved that CERTAIN-TEED will out-last the period of guarantee.

The General makes one-third of the rolls of roofing made in America. Enormous production, economies due to cheap power, modern machinery and favorably located mills, combine to produce the best roofing at the lowest cost.

CERTAIN-TEED is made in rolls; also in slate-covered shingles. There is a type of CERTAIN-TEED for every kind of building, with flat or pitched roofs, from the largest sky-scraper to the smallest residence or out-building.

CERTAIN-TEED is sold by responsible dealers all over the world, at reasonable prices. Before you decide on any type of roof, investigate CERTAIN-TEED.

Figures Which Shout

The newspaper is supreme as an advertising medium in both its fields—local and general.

There is approximately $300,000,000 expended annually for newspaper advertising. Of this sum, between $50,000,000 and $55,000,000 represents space purchased by general advertisers.

This record is not approached by any competing medium.

There are sound reasons for the supremacy of the newspaper. It is the one medium that reaches every consumer of everything, everywhere, every day. It offers economy and exactness, and more nearly eliminates waste than any other medium.

Manufacturers are invited to write to the Bureau of Advertising, American Newspaper Publishers Association, World Building, New York, for a copy of the booklet, "The Dealer and His Friends."

Painless Extractions

During the year 1915 the Cady Dental Offices in Poughkeepsie, Kingston, Newburgh and Middletown performed over ten thousand extractions. These operations were painless. Local Anesthetics were used in the majority of cases but nitrous-oxide gas in a few. This wonderful record should make a deep impression on those who have teeth which require extraction and desire to have the operation done painlessly.

CLINTON AVE. FIVE CHURCH CHAMPIONS

Church who closed the season with a perfect score, not having lost a game. Trinity M. E. Church was second which showed plainly that the Methodists know how to play the game. The winning team will be presented with silver medals at a banquet to be held at the close of the other leagues.

SPINK, STAR ATHLETE.

Phoenicia Boy Making a Record in Williams School.

Erwin S. Spink of Phoenicia was the star athlete in the events of the Williams school's second annual winter carnival run off at Williams-town Saturday. Spink won both the 100 yard ski and snowshoe sprints and the novice and open ski cross-country runs from a field of 12 in each event. The features of the carnival were the ski races in which the contestants were pulled by horses driven by themselves. Young Spink acquired his skill in athletics at Phoenicia, where his father is principal of the Woodland School for boys. This "prep" school is conducted only during the winter and is composed of about 30 boy students, many of whom hail from Cuba and southern states. The Woodland School is at Pantherkill Valley, not far from the famous Woodland valley, being three miles distant from the Roxmore colony.

BILL CARRIGAN.

CARRIGAN SETS LATE TRAINING DATES.

Bill Carrigan, the smiling manager of the World's Champion Boston Braves, is starting the spring training of his team a bit later than any other manager in the American League. The leader of the clamps plans to send his pitchers to Hot Springs, Ark., not earlier than March 10, and will not call upon the rest of the team to report before March 19.

City Treasurer's Office to Close.

The city treasurer's office will not be open on Washington's birthday, Tuesday, but the office will remain open from 7 to 9 o'clock this evening for the benefit of property owners wishing to pay their taxes. Those who have not paid their taxes by Wednesday or next week will have to pay two per cent additional when they do pay. This two per cent additional continues for the first twenty days in March, when five per cent will be added.

Homeless and Starving.

Frank Snyder, 17 years old, a homeless boy who said he lived at Buffalo, gave himself up to the police on Sunday. He was taken ill and was half starved and was afraid he would freeze to death. This morning Recorder Lang sentenced him to thirty days in the county jail.

Benjamin's Love Affair

Scheming Sister Fails to Foil Dan Cupid.

By H. O. M'LACHLAN

Benjamin Dacey finally adjusted his necktie, craned his neck for a better view of the effect and then, picking up his brush, proceeded to arrange the thin blond hair on his head so that it quite concealed his bald spot.

"There," he muttered, somewhat resentfully toying the hair brush aside, "I don't care what Euphemia says, I certainly look as young as that Buddington boy! If I was dark complexioned the difference in age might be more apparent, but as it is—Benjamin did not conclude the sentence; his glance in the mirror was sufficient. It implied entire satisfaction with the reflection of his slender, erect figure, his unwrinkled face, his very blue eyes and the youthful arrangement of flaxen hair. His clothes fitted perfectly and were of a most becoming gray; a delicate gray silk necktie completed the picture.

When he entered the dining room his sister Euphemia, a pale, monkey little woman, surveyed him with a startled glance.

"Benjamin Dacey! Do you know you look like a fool?" she demanded acidly. Benjamin reddened to the edge of his snowy collar and drew out a chair for Euphemia with his customary courtesy. When they were seated opposite one another at the little round table Benjamin laid his napkin across his knee and lifted his light eyebrows at his sister. He waited until the maid had left the room.

"And, why, Euphemia, my dear, do I look like a fool?" he inquired pleasantly.

Euphemia flashed an angry glance at the blond head.

"You've got your hair parted in the middle," she accused.

"So have you," retorted Benjamin as he ate his soup.

"Just like Willie Buddington," went on Euphemia, forgetting all about her hunchbone.

"Yes, and like a thousand other young lads," agreed Benjamin, but his heightened color revealed that he resented the comparison to young Buddington.

"But especially like Willie," pursued Euphemia relentlessly, "and I know the reason why."

"You have the advantage of me there, my dear, unless your reason happens to coincide with my own. I arranged it thus to cover my bald spot."

"As if any one couldn't guess that!" sniffed Euphemia. "It didn't deceive me for a moment. It wouldn't deceive Annabel Moore, either."

Benjamin crimsoned like a peony, and his clinched hand showed a tendency to thump the table.

"Perhaps I am not trying to deceive any one," said Benjamin in a strained voice when Nora had come and gone.

"Then why don't you be open and honest about it? Brush your hair back from your forehead and let the world see the bald spot which every one knows is there. I call it masquerading to."

Benjamin Dacey forgot that he was a gentleman and spoke rudely to his nagging stepister.

"I will brush my hair as you suggest, Euphemia, provided that you will remove the undeniably false teeth from your mouth and cease to deceive the world concerning those charms. I beg you will excuse me. I will lunch downtown."

While Euphemia watched him in cold and silent anger, Benjamin went into the hall, clapped his new panama hat on his youthful looking head and went downtown.

Euphemia Fleming was a selfish woman, cold and harsh by nature. Benjamin had been very good to her since the death of his father's second wife, and because he had promised to care for Euphemia, who was quite without means of her own, he had placed her at the head of his modest bachelor household. But the arrangement was not entirely satisfactory to Benjamin, for little by little his stepister became the mistress of his house—ruled him with a rod of iron, dictated to him when she dared and made home so uncomfortable that he was perforce compelled to seek comfort in his club.

And latterly since Annabel Moore had come into his life Euphemia had been almost unendurable. She suspected that Benjamin was in love with the lovely girl, who was years younger than herself. But Benjamin was well to do, and one could never tell, argued Euphemia to herself, if Annabel seized an opportunity and married Benjamin where would Euphemia Fleming be? Certainly not at the head of the Dacey household, although Benjamin would undoubtedly provide for her.

"I must look out for myself," said Euphemia grimly as she went upstairs to take her afternoon nap.

About 4 o'clock that same day Miss Euphemia Fleming called upon Annabel Moore. As she paused in the doorway while the maid announced her Euphemia was not at all surprised to witness a little scene shadowed in a mirror that reflected the interior of the adjoining library.

Annabel was standing near the fireplace, and on his knees at her feet was Willie Buddington.

Euphemia smiled. It was going to be easier than she had thought. The girl was in love with young Buddington, and Benjamin had never had a chance with the girl.

When she entered the drawing room the scene had magically changed. Willie Buddington was standing dejectedly by while Annabel came forward to greet Euphemia with pleasant cordiality.

After Willie had taken his departure and while Annabel and Euphemia drank tea together the older woman sought for a way to assure herself that young Buddington had indeed proposed to the girl and that she had accepted.

If Annabel's pensiveness was any indication Euphemia had every reason to believe that Benjamin was safe from an indiscreet marriage, while at the same time her own future was assured. She was positive that Benjamin would never love another. This was his first love affair, and she felt positive that it would be his last.

It happened that Euphemia was right. It was Benjamin's Dacey's last love affair.

Annabel blushed and looked conscious when Euphemia praised Willie Buddington; she became intensely embarrassed when Euphemia overstepped the bounds of her slight acquaintance and hinted at a possible romance. Annabel assumed an air of dignity and changed the subject. Euphemia gripped her store teeth and talked about Benjamin.

Annabel did not blush here. On the contrary, she became cold and constrained. Euphemia became nettled and resolved to sting the girl into some revelation of her attitude toward Benjamin.

"My brother is soon to be married," said Euphemia at last, "but perhaps you have heard." She glanced sharply at the girl over the edge of her teacup.

Annabel started violently, and her blue eyes widened.

"Why—yes—no—I haven't heard," she said a little breathlessly.

"I shall be very lonely," went on Euphemia deliberately. "I suppose I shall have to go away and make a home for myself."

"I am sure that Mr. Dacey will not want you to do that," said Annabel quietly. "He seems very fond of you."

"That is all very well," interrupted Euphemia harshly, "but when an old man falls in love he makes a fool of himself and sees nothing save the object of his adoration."

Annabel's eyes flashed.

"I should not describe Mr. Dacey as old," she said quietly.

"He is forty-five," argued Euphemia. "He must seem like a father to you—almost a grandfather!"

"Hardly," laughed Annabel suddenly. "You must not make me believe that your brother is very aged, Miss Euphemia," she said archly, "for he told me one day that he was five years older than you, and you are not old by any means."

Euphemia bridled and tossed her head. She was secretly pleased.

"Well," she gasped, "but you are a mere child, Miss Annabel."

"A mere child of thirty," admitted Annabel.

"Thirty! Then—then—why, Willie Buddington must be years younger than you are!"

Annabel laughed. "He is, ten years younger. You surprised him laying his foolish heart at my feet, Miss Fleming. I will tell you in strict confidence that proposing is merely a habit with Willie. Aunt Celestina says he proposed to her a few weeks before I came, and my aunt tells every one that she is fifty-seven."

"Please don't breathe a word about Benjamin's engagement until he tells you about it himself," warned Euphemia as she took her leave a few moments later.

"I won't," promised Annabel.

As soon as Euphemia reached home she went to her own room and picked up the telephone from her desk.

She called the number of her brother's office and soon had him on the wire.

"What is it, Euphemia?" he asked, with some concern, for she was not in the habit of invading his business hours.

"Did you know that Annabel Moore was engaged to be married?" asked Euphemia in rather a frightened tone.

"I've heard about it," snapped Benjamin. "Who told you, Euphemia?"

"I called on Annabel this afternoon."

"The device you did! Did she tell you of her own accord, or did you ferret it out?"

"Benjamin Dacey, I refuse to answer until you amend the wording of that question," announced Euphemia indignantly.

"Pardon me, Euphemia," said Benjamin testily. "How did Annabel announce her engagement?"

"She didn't announce it," replied Euphemia triumphantly. "I entered the room, and the lucky man was on his knees beside her, so devoted, such a handsome young couple. I always did say that Willie Buddington—what, Benjamin, where are you? Central, why did you cut me off? chattered Euphemia into the receiver.

"Your party rang off of his own accord," giggled central, and Euphemia promised to report her for impertinence.

"Well, anyway, I'm certain of one thing," sighed Euphemia as she removed her wraps and prepared to sit down for an hour's quiet reading—"Benjamin isn't going to marry Annabel Moore, and I guess I'll not be supplanted as mistress of this household!"

At that instant the telephone bell rang sharply. Benjamin's voice responded to her "Hello."

"That you, Euphemia? Well, prepare to be surprised, then! Annabel Moore is engaged—engaged to me, understand? It happened last night, and I couldn't make head or tail of what you were saying awhile ago, so I came to Annabel, and together we straightened it out."

"Now, Euphemia, my dear, this will, of course, make a change in our plans, but Annabel's aunt needs a companion and housekeeper, and it is a very delightful and pleasant position and she is fond of you, so you can consider that. Or if you prefer something else, why, I can settle an income upon you, I'm telling you this over the telephone so that you can get used to the idea before I get home. Did I hear you say that you contemplated me?" he ended.

Euphemia hadn't murmured anything of the sort, but she did now with what grace she could muster at short notice.

"And you can add my love to Annabel," said Euphemia tearfully. "By the way, where is she?"

"Right here—in my arms!" was Benjamin's astonishing reply.

To her own surprise Euphemia smiled at the notion, and, smiling, something hard melted in her heart, and when she repeated her good wishes there was a strong note of sincerity in her tones.

Brierwood Roots.

Algeria is probably the only country which in clearing its land of brushwood at the same time finds a valuable commercial commodity in the roots of that same brushwood and simultaneously removes a menace to the forests which otherwise could only be removed at great expense. The roots of the brierwood, or white heather bush (Erica arborea), are utilized for pipes, and Algeria ships yearly about $100,000 worth of this material, known as brierwood, to this country. The roots are cut into the rough forms of tobacco pipes, called "bouchons" in French. To produce the required quantity an immense tonnage of roots is required, because very often, owing to cracks and other faults, only one rough pipe is found in a fair sized root. The industry can, however, only be carried on where water is plentiful, as it is necessary to keep the roots thoroughly damp from the moment they are drawn from the soil until they are cut into the rough forms and boiled.—Argonaut

A blacksmith of a village in Spain murdered a man and was condemned to be hanged. The chief peasants of the place joined together and begged the alcalde that the blacksmith might not suffer, because he was necessary to the place, which could not do without a blacksmith to shoe horses, mend wheels, etc. "But," said the alcalde, "how then can I fulfill justice?" A laborer answered: "Sir, there are two weavers in the village, and for so small a place one is sufficient; hang the other."

Fear'd Lightning Rods.

Lightning rods, when erected in early days, were in frequent instances torn down by angry mobs, which suspected them to be accountable for failures of crops, earthquakes and other manifestations of divine displeasure. ## FAYORS GOLF PASTIME

Noted Twirler Says Game Is Good for Baseball Players.

Helps One to Gain Absolute Control of Himself, One of Greatest Assets in Game.—Also Assists Batting Materially.

"I cannot agree with those men who say golf is bad for a ball player," says Jack Coombs of the Brooklyn Dodgers. "It helps him more than an ordinary man realizes. One of the greatest assets of the game is absolute control of oneself, in which confidence plays an important part. Thus, the mind being under control, one thinks not of the importance resting upon him. There only is one thought—succeed."

"It is true the swing in golf is far different from that used in baseball. There are few ball players, however, who do not bring that stroke of their profession into golf. If you will look back to the games I pitched for the Athletics on Mondays, you will notice from the box scores that my batting was far superior to that on other days. I played golf every Sunday, rain or shine, and as I often said to the boys, 'That ball looked as big as a pumpkin.' Whether golf playing the day before had anything to do with it or not I dare not say. Being a hug on golf, my own opinion is formed. 'Associations on the golf links are far different from those formed in other walks of life.'

"During the world's series of 1910 Mr. Plank, Ed's father, came from Gettysburg to see the games. He lived with us during his visit. The afternoon before the first game against the Cubs Bender, Ed and I played golf. We came home, went to bed early, and did not wake up until

Jack Coombs.

8:30 the next morning. Upon arising, I awoke and found now he had enjoyed his rest.

"Never slept a wink," he replied. "Been up since 4:30 o'clock. Walked all over Fairmont park. Was too nervous to sleep. How could you and Ed snore so when the series begins today?"

"I had not given the importance of the baseball game a thought. I was thinking, when I went to sleep, how easily Ed and I could have beaten Bender at golf had we played with a little more confidence."

THREE LEADING BREEDS OF CHICKENS

Splendid Chicken Trio.

How many eggs does the ordinary hen lay in a year? What is the highest yield that it is possible to obtain by choosing only the best birds and feeding them with the greatest care?

To these questions no very definite answer can be given, though much light has been thrown on the subject in the past few years. Individual records have been made under the supervision of the agricultural colleges and laying competitions have been instituted in several of the states, in which pens of five or ten birds have been pitted against one another. From the results it is possible to draw a few conclusions.

With poultry, as with other live stock, the amateur is always asking which is the best breed. It was a dispute between the admirers of two breeds that started the first laying contest in Australia 15 years ago. An Australian poultryman who kept Buff Orpingtons was positive that his hens were better egg producers than the

Buff Orpington Cock.

Silver Wyandottes of his neighbor. A wager was made and the first trial of six months' performance was begun. Since then the contests have widened out to include all the leading breeds, yet the question of leadership has not been solved. The original claimants for the honor—the Silver Wyandottes and Buff Orpingtons—have, however, long since been outdistanced, leaving the Leghorns, the Wyandottes and the Plymouth Rocks straining for the lead. The anxiety of the amateur to know "which is the best breed" is still unsatisfied.

Leghorns and Wyandottes. Reviewing the results of the past two years, it is seen that there is something in the strain; that is a breeder with a flock of good layers can raise from them birds that will distinguish themselves in egg production.

In the Storr's Connecticut contest, which closed a year ago, the first place was taken by a pen of White Leghorns, the property of F. P. Lincoln of that state. This year the same poultryman is well up on the list with a pen of Plymouth Rocks. In 1914, Tom Barron of Catforth, England, was in second place with White Wyandottes, and this year captured first and third prizes with Wyandottes and Leghorns, respectively. Apparently the skillful breeder can handle any one of several breeds and get results.

In the Philadelphia contest Mr. Barron has also been a consistent winner having taken first and second place in the test a year ago, and coming third in the competition just closed. Another English breeder, Ed Corn, was in third place last year and up among the leaders this year.

For the past four years an elaborate test has been carried out in Missouri, which included several of the lesser known breeds such as Anconas and Hamburgs. Comparisons were made by months. The laying season has a very direct bearing on profits seeing that winter eggs command the higher prices. Leghorns and Plymouth Rocks proved the best workers in December and January, while Orpingtons led in February. Through the summer there was little advantage, though it was noticeable that Rhode Island Reds began to show up in July and August.

Over the 200 Mark. In the individual records for Missouri pens, extending over four years, there were 249 hens or 10 per cent of the whole number of entries that laid 200 eggs or more in one year. Fourteen per cent of the hens laid less than 90 eggs in one year. The average of all the hens during the four years was 152 eggs each.

Commenting on the profit to be obtained from the good layers and the shirkers, the manager of the contest says, that at 20 cents per dozen and an estimated cost of $1 to feed each hen a year, the hen which lays 60 eggs in a year, just pays for her feed, and estimating that it costs one-half as much for housing and labor, the hen which lays 90 eggs per year just pays her keeping. The hen which lays 100 eggs in one year makes a profit of ten eggs, while the hen which lays the sum of 120 eggs in one year makes a profit of 30 cents, and is therefore three times as profitable as the hen which lays 100 eggs. The hens which lay 200 eggs or more, which would be 1.83-1.3 profit. Considering this as interest at per cent on an investment, the hen would be worth $22.91.

One of the conclusions reached by Miller Purvis, the noted poultry authority, is that the competitions have brought the egg laying hen into her proper place beside the fancy bird that wins in the show. For every dollar spent for poultry for food, at least $2 are spent for eggs. Hence, the poultryman who is looking for breeding stock will demand to be shown something in the way of accomplishment in the flock he is choosing from. Before the time of laying competitions breeders made claims concerning the prizes they had won at poultry shows; now they add to these claims the egg records of their hens, if they have had the courage to put them to the test. The Oregon crossbred hen that laid 303 eggs in a year and 505 in two consecutive years has had more newspaper space used in telling about her than any other hen. Fifteen years ago a hen with the same blood mixture would have been called a mongrel and no attention would have been paid to her. Today her daughters or near female relatives have taken third place in the contest at San Francisco exposition. Further, a pen of barnyard mongrels tested in one of the competitions laid almost exactly the number of eggs that made the average of the 495 purebred hens constituting the remainder of the entries.

GREEN FEED VERY ESSENTIAL

Hens Relish Turnips, Beets, Mangels, Etc.—Sprouted Oats Probably Best for Winter.

Are you giving the layers as much grain feed as they want? If not, better see to it. Hens consume large quantities of grass and when shut up they miss this food.

Turnips, beets, mangels, rutabagas, carrots and the like are relished by the fowls. Cabbage is too. Sprouted oats is, perhaps, the best green feed, as in it the hens get both the green sprouts and the grain.

Some kind of green ration is necessary, however, if the hens are expected to lay properly during the winter months.

Green Feed Is Necessary. Until grass comes, the laying hen must be fed with its equivalent in the shape of cabbage, beets, sprouted oats or soaked alfalfa leaves. Without green food to supplement the grain ration, the hen will not prove profitable.

HOW TO WARD OFF DISEASES BY HAVING CLEAN HANDS.

Most epidemics of typhoid fever nowadays are ultimately traced to a single person who, either sick with the disease, sickening with it, convalescent from it, or acting as a chronic "carrier" of the germs, literally hands the infection to those who happen to be in contact with him.

But if typhoid and dysentery and cholera were the only diseases spread by unwashed hands we wouldn't say a word—we'd leave it to the health authorities. Unfortunately a lot of other diseases are peddled about in the same manner, such as diphtheria, pneumonia, sore throat and "cold" in the head, and with the exception of diphtheria and pneumonia these diseases do not interest the health authorities.

There are families where children sit at table and say grace with unwashed hands. There are other families where parents take a squint at the children's hands and, if they discover no microbes thereon, let the youngsters sit right down and shovel in whatever contamination may have been collected through the day. Is it any wonder grandma still has occasional seeming run-dictions of her idea that "sugar makes worms"? Worms, make worms, and children help the work along by transplanting the eggs from contaminated soil to food and from the food to their own innocent mouths.

THE MIDNIGHT SUPPERS.

How to Make Dream Cakes on Your Chafing Dish.

The easiest things in the world to make in a chafing dish are dream cakes, and everybody who likes a rabbit will have over these toothsome dainties, which are built of cheese, cream and slices of bread. They are less trouble than the ordinary Welsh rabbit, which requires a good many ingredients and prolonged cooking, and they are "hearty" enough to make a sustaining supper after an evening of bridge. Two or at most three dream cakes will be all the average person can eat, unless he is willing to risk the possible weird dreams which are said to have given these rich delicacies their name.

Press half a pound of soft rarebit cheese through a potato currier or a colander until you have a pile of light, flaky cheese particles. Mix with the cheese half a cupful of sweet cream Season with a pinch of salt, paprika, a dash of mustard and a teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce. Have ready slices of bread, cut rather thick and with the crusts trimmed off. Spread one slice thickly with the cheese, another slice down upon it and then brown the sandwich thus made in a chafing dish over which butter is bubbling. When golden brown and crisp serve piping hot on a small plate. Do not have the sandwiches too large. Small ones will brown more quickly. Ordinary slices of bread, trimmed at the edges, may be cut in two diagonally to make three cornered dream cakes.

How to Teach Children the Great Law of Cause and Effect.

Children should be taught from the beginning the great moral law of cause and effect, not to look for wealth without work, for honor without honesty. Teach them that character stands above surroundings and that esteem should be bestowed where it is due, whether for mental endowment or material wealth.

It is not all of morals to moralize, and less precept and more example is to be commended. The living realization, the quiet suggestion, the favorable opportunity, are the efficient teachers. Ignorance is responsible for a great deal of wickedness, but evil example and parental neglect are responsible for vastly more.

A sense of right and wrong should be cultivated early in a child's life, and much may be accomplished in this direction before the child leaves the mother's nursery training.

How to Case Harden Iron Utensils When They Are Quite New.

Make up a paste of powdered prussiate of potash and water. Coat the iron with this paste and set it aside to dry. Let the forge fire be clear and bright. When the paste is dry upon the iron thrust the iron into the fire until it is cherry red. Keep it at this heat for a few minutes and then take it out. Plunge it into cold water, and it will be found converted into steel at the surface.—Popular Science Monthly.

How to Sew Buttons on Children's Clothes For Permanency.

When you sew buttons on the children's dresses run a tape down the wrong side first. If each button is sewed through to the tape no amount of hard wear or abuse in the laundry will tear it from the goods. Another wise precaution is to use linen thread for the buttons on your boy's suit.

How to Add Life to Candles During the Long Evenings.

With the shorter days here candles are being used more and more for dinner. If the candles are given a coat of colorless varnish and allowed to dry thoroughly before lighting they will not only last longer, but the varnish will prevent the wax melting and running down.

AMERICAN MANNIKIN 2,000 YEARS OLD DISCOVERED.

Here is the oldest American antique known, a stone mannikin dating from 100 B. C., and found by a Mexican peon ploughing his fields in the district of San Andres, Tuxtla. It is of conical shape, in jade or nephrite, about six and a half inches in diameter at the base, and three-quarters of an inch in diameter at the top. On it are carved the glyphs or symbolic figures which were the writing of the ancient Mexicans, and by means of which they recorded in stone the history of their race and achievements. But they give no clue to what this figure represents. With the upper part of the head of a man, it resembles the bill of a bird and wings cover its sides. It is an idol probably of these ancient people whose forms of worship are still unknown.

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTING LETTER

(By Frank G. Menke.)

New York, Feb. 21.—How was it, you ask, that Harry F. Sinclair secured control of about 30 of the brightest stars in the Federal League and was permitted to sell them to the highest bidder and pocket the proceeds?

The answer is simple. Sinclair purchased Lee Magee and Benny Kauff and several stars from the Brookfield owners late last summer, for the purpose of putting them in the 1916 lineup of the team which the Feds planned to place in New York city and which Sinclair was to back. When the Feds were eliminated from the baseball world Sinclair no longer had any place to play those Brookfielders and so he did the only natural thing—he sold them.

Sinclair took the other players from the Kansas City, Buffalo and other clubs in payment for money which he loaned to those clubs during the 1915 season. Sinclair has kept silent as to how he actually came into ownership of those players, merely because he saw no reason to make it known that some of the club were in such shape that he had to loan them money out of his private account.

Sinclair Loaned $200,000.

When peace was made in the baseball world it was found that Sinclair was about $200,000 in the "hole" through his advances of cash to the other Federal League clubs. Sinclair was willing to wipe clean the slate and charge the $200,000 to a "recreation" account, but the Sinclair debtors insisted that Sinclair take the pick of their players, pointing out that in selling them he would reimburse himself to a certain extent for his loan.

Sinclair accepted the players and then opened negotiations for their sale. Exclusive of what he has received for Kauff, Magee and the other Brooklyn players, Sinclair has realized less than $100,000 through his "auctioneering." When all the deals are closed, his total receipts from the sale of diamond talent will be in the neighborhood of $115,000, not figuring in the $60,000 he got for Kauff and Magee.

Recently one of the New York writers, whose chief amusement during the past two years has been found in "panning" the Feds, slipped a cable by printing a story about Sinclair which he declared "absolutely untrue" by the man whom it concerned—George Stovall.

Stovall Spikes Canard.

The story was to the effect that Stovall is trying to get reimbursed for the $1,000 he paid as advance money when he signed Jimmy Johnson, the Pacific Coast outfielder. The story states that Sinclair received $5,000 from the sale of Johnson to the Brooklyn Dodgers and that Sinclair would pay Stovall the $1,000 which "Stovall advanced out of his own pocket."

Here is Stovall's own story covering that deal:

"I was instructed to go to California and sign up Johnson, paying him $1,000 the moment he signed the contract. When I left for the coast I was told that $1,000 would be wired to my bank to be placed to my credit so as to take care of the check I was to issue to Johnson.

"When I signed up Johnson I gave him my personal check for $1,000. When I got back home I found that the $1,000 had been wired to my bank by Sinclair's agent, in keeping with the agreement, and that the money was deposited to my account two days before I issued the check against it."

Furthermore, we get it absolutely straight that Sinclair never got $5,000 from Charlie Ebbets for Johnson; that Sinclair turned over Johnson to Ebbets upon the sole condition that Ebbets reimburse him for the $1,000 advance money and also for the travelling expenses incurred in securing Johnson.

Another Fake Story.

Another story by the same writer had it that "it is rumored" that the estate of Robert B. Ward is going to demand from Sinclair a part of the $60,000 he got through the sale of Lee Magee and Benny Kauff. The Ward family absolutely denies that it ever had such an intention. Here is

BUSINESS NOTICES.

Elmer Palen, who is in the west, will return Thursday, February 24, with a car load of horses from Missouri, which he will sell at his auction market, Tuesday, February 29, at No. 682-684 Broadway. Coupons redeemed for cash or trade. McTague, 48 Broadway.

Walter S. Ward's explanation of the Kauff-Magee tangle:

"We turned over both these players to Sinclair toward the end of the 1915 season for a consideration satisfactory to both parties. Sinclair was going to use them in his New York club. He had absolute ownership of those players from the moment that the deal with him was made, and he had absolute right to sell those players to any one and at any price he chose. Our claim to those players ceased—when we turned them over to Sinclair.

"Any story to the effect that we are going to try to get some of the $60,000 from Sinclair is nothing but a malicious misstatement."

HIGH SCHOOL TEAMS WIN

H. S. Girls, 32; Saugerties Girls, 6.
Saturday afternoon the basketball team of the Girls' Athletic Association entertained five sturdy maidens from Saugerties, and before the latter returned to their own home town they were presented with the usual guest token given by the maroon and white. That is a defeat, Kingston having 32 points and Saugerties 6.

Although these fair representatives of the Saugerties school lost, still they received the benefit of that Christian doctrine, "return good for evil," for it will be remembered that the only athletic defeat our high school has suffered so far since September was received when our boys played Saugerties three weeks ago, and on that occasion there was much criticism regarding the judging of the Saugerties referee, so that it is quite natural that the Saugerties girls were surprised when not a single foul was called on them last Saturday afternoon, and when several were called by the referee, who was from this city, on our own team.

It is fortunate that the Girls' team are thrifty in the matter of their finances, for the support they continue to get from the student body is undeniably rotten.

During the game Miss Wood and Miss Weber were put in the game and the line up was as follows:

H. S. Midnets, 23; Poughkeepsie Juniors, 16.
While their big sisters were battling with the Amazons from the neighboring town on the north, the Midnets were waging offensive warfare with youngsters in the Bridge City on the south.

When the Midnets reached Poughkeepsie their appetites were far out of proportion to the size of their bodies. Therefore they were easily led on by the arts of their rivals and succumbed to the harmless pleasure of an appealing luncheon counter.

After their hunger had been more than relieved they went on the floor confident of easy success. But alas, the pie they had under their belts said "not so fast," and the sandwiches advised them to rest up a bit so that when the game was already three-quarters over Poughkeepsie was in the lead, and the little Midnets were uncomfortable in mind and body.

But the pie relented and the Midnets won. Therefore, let this be a little lesson to all the high school teams showing the self confidence and assurance must have their limits.

The Midnets' game was staged before a game between the Poughkeepsie varsity and Albany high, which was won by the Bridge City five by the score of 16 to 6.

Midnets' score was as follows:

Poughkeepsie Here Tonight.
Absolutely the hardest game which the high school varsity plays this season will be gone through this evening in the school gymnasium when the Poughkeepsie first team will play our five.

If the high school is to lose a game fairly and squarely it will be this one and likewise, if the local fellows win this game it will be putting a big feather in the cap of the varsity team.

The Bridge City is putting out a team this year that searches from Albany to New York for any and all rival forces. They acknowledge our supremacy in football but assert that they will show K. H. S. how to play real basketball. This is by no means an idle boast, but Kingston at her best can beat them, and if something like the support given at the old U. A. K. A. games is resurrected and used, the maroon and white have a fair show of winning. The game commences at 8 o'clock and will be followed by a dance.

tive stories and poems. This is a usual custom and often furnishes a good deal of useful material for the manuscript.

The prizes are $2.50 for first prize poem; $1 for second prize poem; $2.50 for first prize story, and $1 for the second prize story. As this is connected with school work, the contest is only open to high school students, and the English teachers will be asked to act as judges.

The conditions are: First—All manuscripts must be in the hands of the editor not later than Friday night, April 14. Second—All manuscript must be written on one side of composition paper only. Third—Manuscript must not contain more than 1,500 words. Fourth—Manuscript must be in the author's handwriting and must be accompanied by an envelope containing the name of the author.

It has been decided that hereafter an admission of only 10 cents will be charged to the basketball games, but anyone wishing to stay to the dance which usually follows these games will pay the usual 25 cents admission, and anyone coming in for the dance alone will do the same. This plan will be used for the first time evening when Kingston plays the Poughkeepsie five, and it is hoped that this will stimulate the attendance at the game and make the much needed support of the student body more certain.

Enjoyment of Food.

There is a mistaken notion that the hygiene of food means "giving up all the things that taste good." While it is true that, in many cases, sacrifices have to be made, the net result of reforming one's diet is not to diminish but to increase the enjoyment of food. In general, it is extremely unhygienic to eat foods which are not relished. Experiments by Pavlov and others have shown that the taste and enjoyment of food stimulate the flow of digestive juices.

COLD SUSPENDS ICE HARVESTING

With the thermometer hovering around the zero mark and a high wind blowing the men at work harvesting ice at Kingston Point this morning were forced to stop work as the wind made it impossible to keep the canals open. Work was resumed this afternoon, however.

Sunday night and early this morning some of the coldest weather of the season held the city in its grip and some report that the thermometer dropped as low as ten below zero during the night. At 7:30 o'clock this morning on lower Broadway thermometers registered four below zero.

The cold spell continued throughout the day and the weather was extremely favorable to making ice.

So cold was it during the night that the channel of the Transport ferry was frozen over, and it took over two hours for the ferry to plow her way through on her first trip.

Residents on the other side of the creek are walking back and forth across the ice which is over half a foot in thickness.

The work of filling the large Knickerbocker house in the creek will start Tuesday morning. The ice is 9 and 10 inches in thickness.

Lou-Tellegen Not Coming.

Shortly after closing contracts with the "King of Nowhere" in which Lou-Tellegen is getting into shape to open at the Cort theatre in New York city in a few days, the management of the company decided not to continue the one night stand but to rest up instead. It is with regret that Manager Childers announces that he cannot secure this international star for Kingston, as it is a rare treat for a company of this caliber to play here. "The Great Divide," a five part drama produced in the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, will be the photo-play which will be presented tonight instead of this play as announced Friday.

Not An Epicure.

One afternoon a sad eyed hobo rambled up the garden walk of a suburban home and meekly tapped on the back door.

"Lady," said he in a fearful voice to the woman who answered his knock, "I hadn't had a thing to eat since last week. If you would only give me some bread or—"

"Mary," suddenly interjected the woman, addressing some lovelike person, "bring Towser out here at once."

"All right, dear lady," said the hobo in a resigned voice; "even dog meat is better than starlin' to death."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Laughter.

Laughter begins either with the mouth or the eyes. Then come the other muscular groups, and then come the vocal expressions of laughter, such as drags, chuckles, sniggers, snickers, giggles, snorts, grunts, foghorn rumbles, yells, shrieks, guffaws, trills, chuckles, sniffs and all sorts of peculiar bird notes and musical sounds.—Exchange.

Coroners in England.

In early times the coroner in England was a revenue officer of the crown, and his business was to find out the criminals, extort their confessions and confiscate their goods to the crown. From records it appeared that King Alfred had a predilection for hunting his coroners because they did what was unjust.

SWAYED BY THE WEATHER.

Some Persons Are Greatly Influenced by Climatic Conditions.

Weather influences on man may be roughly divided into two classes—viz, those which are direct and obvious and those which are the more or less indirect and obscure. The influences belonging to the second class have been during the past decade or so the subject of immense research.

Some persons are pronounced "meteoropaths," abnormally subject to "weather neuroses." Friedrich Nietzsche was one par excellence. Such persons, as a rule, are more specifically "cyclonopaths." The passage of cyclonic depressions accompanied by certain characteristic types of weather is reflected in their sensation and in the mode of operation of their bodily and mental functions.

The gross change of barometric pressure pertaining to a cyclone, or "low," is not in itself an important factor in producing these manifestations since it never exceeds that experienced in the ascent (without the effort of climbing) of a good sized hill. Indeed, many "lows" do not expose us to greater pressure of changes in the course of twenty-four hours than we experience in a couple of minutes in riding to the top of an average office building.—Baltimore American.

A GREAT DESTROYER.

One That is Actively at Work Every Minute of the Day.

I am more powerful than the combined armies of the world. I have destroyed more men than all the wars of the world. I am more deadly than bullets, and I have wrecked more homes than the mightiest of siege guns. I steal in the United States alone more than $500,000,000 each year. I spare no one, and I find my victims among rich and poor alike.

The young and old, the strong and weak, widows and orphans, know me. I loom up to such proportions that I cast my shadows over every field of labor from the turning of the grindstone to the moving of every railroad train. I massacre thousands on thousands of wage earners in a year. I lurk in unseen places and do most of my work silently. You are warned against me, but you heed not. I am relentless.

I am everywhere, in the home, on the streets, in the factory, at railroad crossings, on the seas. I bring sickness, degradation and death, and yet few seek to avoid me. I destroy, crush or maim. I give nothing, but take all. I am your worst enemy. I am Carelessness.—Hofyoke Transcriber.

Nations That Left No Sign.

There are two great nations of antiquity whose inscriptions cannot yet be read—the Etruscans and the Hittites. The Etruscans occupied a part of Italy corresponding roughly to what is now known as Tuscany. The Hittites at one time occupied a part of Palestine and ruled with the Canaanites to resist the invasion by the Israelites under Joshua. The Etruscan and Hittite inscriptions have been the attempts of scholars to decipher them, though no one knows when some one may stumble on a bilingual inscription which will serve as a key. Just as the Rosetta stone, discovered in Egypt in 1799, served as a key to the Egyptian hieroglyphics. In the new world the so-called Maya inscriptions, found on the ruins in Yucatan, are also a puzzle to scientists.—Christian Herald.

Statesman and Politician.

A statesman knows what ought to be done and a politician does something else and gets away with it.

BRIGHTER CHILDREN

Children are probably brighter to-day than a generation ago—but are they stronger? That's a grave question. So many pinched faces, dulled eyes and languid feelings make us wonder if they will ever grow into robust, healthy men and women.

If your children catch colds easily, are tired when rising, lack healthy color, or find studies difficult, give them Scott's Emulsion for one month to enrich their blood and restore the body-forces to healthy action.

Scott's Emulsion is used in private schools. It is not a "patent medicine," simply a highly concentrated oil-food, without alcohol or harmful drugs. It cannot harm; it improves blood; it benefits lungs and strengthens the system. Your druggist has it—refuse substitutes. Scott & Bowne, Bloomfield, N. J. 15-2

MINSTRELS OF TRIPOLI.

Mysterious Musicians Who Flit From Place to Place at All Hours.

The strange music and mysterious musicians heard and seen in Tripoli are described by Mrs. Mabel L. Todd in her book, "Tripoli the Mysterious."

"The children are possessed of wonderful mental quickness. They acquire languages without effort, and the street urchins use easily French, Italian and all the languages that are current in their narrow streets. The strange music of the city, too—the weird chants, the cymbals, flageolets and queer stringed instruments—deeply impresses the American visitor.

"Sometimes at dawn, when roofs and minarets were dazzlingly white against the sapphire sky, while yet the labyrinthine streets at the bottoms of steep canyons lay in twilight gray, strange men from the desert would stalk by, making uncanny music.

"One of them, very tall and blacker than most, was dressed in a low necked, short sleeved garment, greatly abbreviated as to skirts, playing melodies in a minor mode unknown to the west, and his stride was full of a dignity well nigh appalling.

"The instrument slightly resembled a Scotch bagpipe decorated with barbaric strings of shells and beads, an inflated skin with a primitive mouth-piece and at the opposite end two pointed projections like horns. His companion beat upon a curious little tom-tom and now and then sang a bloodcurdling chant.

"Black boys followed, jumped, shouted, danced like wild creatures, excited beyond all bounds by this oddly compelling music as the rhythm penetrated and seized their imagination. Although these men of mystery generally passed about sunrise, they sometimes went by in the night. Once or twice the weird performance took place about 2 o'clock in the morning. The minstrels always walked with peculiar swiftness, intent upon the serious business in hand."

LAYING A SPECTER.

A Filmy Blue Light and Some Daring Japanese Police.

In the village of Hase, near Kanazaki, at the end of the Rokusan range, says the Kobe Yushin, rumors were set afloat not long ago that in the small hours of the morning a phantom could be seen at the Miyama pass, where some time ago a murder was committed by robbers. The ghost, whenever he caught sight of a lonely traveler, would attempt to stop him, as if he had something important to say. People reported having seen a filmy blue light hovering in their path. In the whole village no one dared thereafter to walk that way after dark.

The rumor was laughed at by the skeptical police, but late one night a number of officers were instructed to patrol the haunted pass in the hope of bringing relief to the tortured minds of the timid by proving that there was no ghost or, should he be met, putting him under arrest. Every half hour after midnight a different policeman was to traverse the pass. Up to half past 2, nothing happened. Then one of them saw the blue light in front of him. He blew his whistle and ran—back to the police station. The others also ran—in the same direction.

When morning came the whole countryside joined the police in making search for the ghost. What they found near the scene of the blue light was a human skeleton in a long disused lime kiln. The local scientist declared that the light was a phosphorescence from the poor neglected bones, which were thereupon interred with full Buddhist ceremony at Kanazaki and the people as far as Kanazaki breathe easier.

Chinese Typewriters.

A Chinese typewriter is a wonderful contrivance. It has 4,200 characters. It has only three keys. It can make 50,000 letters or characters by combinations of the basic 4,200. To write a letter you turn a cylinder upon which are the 4,200 characters until the right one comes opposite the keyboard. If the guide on another cylinder. After striking the printing key, just as on an American machine, you begin a still hunt for the next character which you are to print, and so on while reason lasts.—Christian Herald.

Pleasing Superiority.

"Why are there so many old jokes on the stage?" "Oh, they go good. That is due to the feeling of superiority produced by the fact that you know the answer while the actor stink who is being told the joke apparently does not."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Daily Bath.

Frequent bathing is conducive to good health. It keeps the pores of the skin clear, so that they can perform their proper functions, clearing the system of excretions which cannot be discharged in other ways. A brisk rub after the bath promotes circulation of the blood.

AUTO OFFERINGS

February is the month when auto bargains are plentiful. For the big garages that bought up the usable cars last fall are ready to unload them at remarkably low prices and the individual owners, who intend to buy new cars for the spring season, are ready to sell their old cars.

Think of how much pleasure your family would get out of one of these this summer and you can get one too, for a mere song. If you ask for it by a Freeman Want Ad.

TAKE NOTICE that the annual meeting of stockholders of the Albany Traction Company will be held at the general office of the company, 22 Ferry Street, Kingston, N. Y., March 6, 1916, at 12 o'clock noon, for the purpose of electing directors of the company for the ensuing year and for the transaction of such other business as may be brought before the meeting.

Dated, Kingston, N. Y., Feb. 21, 1916.
M. H. FLEMING, Secretary.

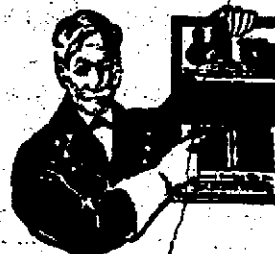

Conservation stands sentinel over the natural resources of our country, and forbids destruction of forests, mines and animal life.

Conservation multiplies the by-products of industry, and changes waste into profit. It is conservation that turns rags into miladi's dainty note paper.

It is conservation that gathers together worn-out garments, discarded sheets, carpets and similar objects which have served their useful purposes. In the General's big roofing mills, these are macerated, saturated, sterilized and beaten into pulp, which finally comes out of the rollers in one continuous sheet of clean, strong roofing felt.

It is then thoroughly saturated with the General's own blend of soft asphalt, and coated with a blend of harder asphalt, which keeps the inner saturation soft and prevents the drying-out process so destructive to the ordinary roofing. This explains why

You can identify CERTAIN-TEED Roofing by the name, which is conspicuously displayed on every roller bundle. Look for this label, and be satisfied with none that doesn't show it.

Certain-teed Roofing

outlasts other roofing; also why the General can safely guarantee it for 5, 10 or 15 years, according to ply. Experience has proved that CERTAIN-TEED will outlast the period of guarantee.

The General makes one-third of the rolls of roofing made in America. Enormous production, economies due to cheap power, modern machinery and favorably located mills, combine to produce the best roofing at the lowest cost.

CERTAIN-TEED is made in rolls, also in slate-covered shingles. There is a type of CERTAIN-TEED for every kind of building, with flat or pitched roofs, from the largest sky-scraper to the smallest residence or out-building.

CERTAIN-TEED is sold by responsible dealers all over the world, at reasonable prices. Before you decide on any type of roof, investigate CERTAIN-TEED.

Figures Which Shout

The newspaper is supreme as an advertising medium in both its fields—local and general.

There is approximately $300,000,000 expended annually for newspaper advertising. Of this sum, between $50,000,000 and $55,000,000 represents space purchased by general advertisers.

This record is not approached by any competing medium.

There are sound reasons for the supremacy of the newspaper. It is the one medium that reaches every consumer of every thing, everywhere, every day. It offers economy and exactness, and more nearly eliminates waste than any other medium.

Manufacturers are invited to write to the Bureau of Advertising, American Newspaper Publishers' Association, World Building, New York, for a copy of the booklet, "The Dealer and His Friends."

Painless Extractions

During the year 1915 the Cady Dental Offices in Poughkeepsie, Kingston, Newburgh and Middletown performed over ten thousand extractions. These operations were painless. Local Anesthetics were used in the majority of cases but nitrous-oxide gas in a few. This wonderful record should make a deep impression on those who have teeth which require extraction and desire to have the operation done painlessly.

SPINK, STAR ATHLETE.

Phoenicia Boy Making a Record in Williams School.

Erwin S. Spink of Phoenicia was the star athlete in the events of the Williams school's second annual winter carnival run off at Williams town Saturday. Spink won both the 100 yard ski and snowshoe sprints and the novice and open ski cross-country runs from a field of 12 in each event. The features of the carnival were the ski races in which the contestants were pulled by horses driven by themselves. Young Spink acquired his skill in athletics at Phoenicia, where his father is principal of the Woodland School for boys. This "prep" school is composed of about 20 boy students, many of whom hail from Cuba and southern states. The Woodland School is at Pantherkill Valley, not far from the famous Woodland valley, being three miles distant from the Roxmore colony.

BILL CARRIGAN.

CARRIGAN SETS LATE TRAINING DATES.

Bill Carrigan, the smiling manager of the World's Champion Boston Braves, is starting the spring training of his team a bit later than any other manager in the American League. The leader of the clumps plans to send his pitchers to Hot Springs, Ark., not earlier than March 10, and will not call upon the rest of the team to report before March 19.

City Treasurer's Office to Close.

Benjamin's Love Affair

Scheming Sister Fails to Foil Dan Cupid.

By H. O. McLACHLAN

Benjamin Dacey finally adjusted his necktie, craned his neck for a better view of the effect and then, picking up his brush, proceeded to arrange the thin blond hair on his head so that it quite concealed his bald spot.

"There," he muttered, somewhat resentfully toasting the hair brush aside. "I don't care what Euphemia says, I certainly look as young as that Buddington boy! If I was dark complexioned the difference in age might be more apparent, but as it is—Benjamin did not conclude the sentence; his glance in the mirror was sufficient. It implied entire satisfaction with the reflection of his slender, erect figure, his unwrinkled face, his very blue eyes and the youthful arrangement of flaxen hair. His clothes fitted perfectly and were of a most becoming gray; a delicate gray silk necktie completed the picture.

When he entered the dining room his sister Euphemia, a pale, mousey little woman, surveyed him with a startled glance.

"Benjamin Dacey! Do you know you look like a fool?" she demanded acidly.

Benjamin reddened to the edge of his snowy collar and drew out a chair for Euphemia with his customary courtesy. When they were seated opposite one another at the little round table Benjamin laid his napkin across his knee and lifted his light eyebrows at his sister. He waited until the maid had left the room.

"And, why, Euphemia, my dear, do I look like a fool?" he inquired pleasantly.

Euphemia flashed an angry glance at the blond head.

"You've got your hair parted in the middle," she accused.

"So have you," retorted Benjamin as he ate his soup.

"Just like Willie Buddington," went on Euphemia, forgetting all about her luncheon.

"Yes, and like a thousand other young lads," agreed Benjamin, but his heightened color revealed that he resented the comparison to young Buddington.

"But especially like Willie," pursued Euphemia relentlessly, "and I know the reason why."

"You have the advantage of me there, my dear, unless your reason happens to coincide with my own. I arranged it thus to cover my bald spot."

"As if any one couldn't guess that?" snorted Euphemia. "It didn't deceive came the mistress of his house—ruled him with a rod of iron, directed to him when she dared and made home so uncomfortable that he was perforce compelled to seek comfort in his club.

And latterly since Annabel Moore had come into his life Euphemia had been almost unendurable. She suspected that Benjamin was in love with the lovely girl, who was years younger than herself. But Benjamin was well to do, and one could never tell, argued Euphemia to herself, if Annabel seized an opportunity and married Benjamin where would Euphemia Fleming be? Certainly not at the head of the Dacey household, although Benjamin would undoubtedly provide for her.

"I must look out for myself," said Euphemia grimly as she went upstairs to take her afternoon nap.

About 4 o'clock that same day Miss Euphemia Fleming called upon Annabel Moore. As she paused in the doorway while the maid announced her Euphemia was not at all surprised to witness a little scene shadowed in a mirror that reflected the interior of the adjoining library.

Annabel was standing near the fireplace, and on his knees at her feet was Willie Buddington.

Euphemia smiled. It was going to be easier than she had thought. The girl was in love with young Buddington, and Benjamin had never had a chance with the girl.

When she entered the drawing room the scene had magically changed. Willie Buddington was standing dejectedly by while Annabel came forward to greet Euphemia with pleasant cordiality.

After Willie had taken his departure and while Annabel and Euphemia drank tea together the older woman sought for a way to assure herself that young Buddington had indeed proposed to the girl and that she had accepted.

If Annabel's pensiveness was any indication Euphemia had every reason to believe that Benjamin was safe from an indiscreet marriage, while at the same time her own future was assured. She was positive that Benjamin would never love another. This was his first love affair, and she felt positive that it would be his last.

It happened that Euphemia was right. It was Benjamin's Dacey's last love affair.

Annabel blushed and looked conscious when Euphemia praised Willie Buddington; she became intensely embarrassed when Euphemia overstepped the bounds of her slight acquaintance and hinted at a possible romance. Annabel assumed an air of dignity and changed the subject. Euphemia gripped her store teeth and talked about Benjamin.

Annabel did not blush here. On the contrary, she became cold and constrained. Euphemia became nettled and resolved to sting the girl into some revelation of her attitude toward Benjamin.

"My brother is soon to be married," said Euphemia at last. "but perhaps you have heard." She glanced sharply at the girl over the edge of her teacup.

Annabel started violently, and her blue eyes widened.

"What—yes—no—I haven't heard," she said a little breathlessly.

"I shall be very lonely," went on Euphemia deliberately. "I suppose I shall have to go away and make a home for myself."

"I am sure that Mr. Dacey will not want you to do that," said Annabel quietly. "He seems very fond of you."

"That is all very well," interrupted Euphemia harshly. "but when an old man falls in love he makes a fool of himself and sees nothing save the object of his adoration."

Annabel's eyes flashed.

"I should not describe Mr. Dacey as old," she said quietly.

"He is forty-five," argued Euphemia. "He must seem like a father to you—almost a grandfather."

"Hardly," laughed Annabel suddenly. "You must not make me believe that your brother is very aged, Miss Euphemia," she said archly. "for he told me one day that he was five years older than you, and you are not old by any means."

Euphemia bridled and tossed her head. She was secretly pleased.

"Well," she gasped, "but you are a mere child, Miss Annabel."

"A mere child of—thirty," admitted Annabel.

"Thirty! Then—then—why, Willie Buddington must be years younger than you are!"

Annabel laughed. "He is ten years younger. You surprised him laying his foolish heart at my feet, Miss Fleming. I will tell you in strict confidence that proposing is merely a habit with Willie. Aunt Celestina says he proposed to her a few weeks before I came, and my aunt tells every one that she is fifty-seven."

"Please don't breathe a word about Benjamin's engagement until he tells you about it himself," warned Euphemia as she took her leave a few moments later.

"I won't," promised Annabel.

As soon as Euphemia reached home she went to her own room and picked up the telephone from her desk.

She called the number of her brother's office and soon had him on the wire.

"What is it, Euphemia?" he asked, with some concern, for she was not in the habit of invading his business hours.

"Did you know that Annabel Moore was engaged to be married?" asked Euphemia in rather a frightened tone.

"I've heard about it," snapped Benjamin. "Who told you, Euphemia?"

"I called on Annabel this afternoon."

"The deuce you did! Did she tell you of her own accord, or did you ferret it out?"

"Benjamin Dacey, I refuse to answer until you amend the wording of that question," announced Euphemia indignantly.

"Pardon me, Euphemia," said Benjamin testily. "How did Annabel announce her engagement?"

"She didn't announce it," replied Euphemia triumphantly. "I entered the room, and the lucky man was on his knees beside her, so devoted, such a handsome young couple. I always did say that Willie Buddington—what, Benjamin, where are you? Central, why did you cut me off?" chattered Euphemia into the receiver.

"Your party rang off of his own accord," giggled central, and Euphemia promised to report her for impertinence.

"Well, anyway, I'm certain of one thing," sighed Euphemia as she removed her wraps and prepared to sit down for an hour's quiet reading. "Benjamin isn't going to marry Annabel Moore, and I guess I'll not be supplanted as mistress of this household."

At that instant the telephone bell rang sharply. Benjamin's voice responded to her "Hello."

"That you, Euphemia? Well, prepare to be surprised, then! Annabel Moore is engaged—engaged to me, understand? It happened last night, and I couldn't make head or tail of what you were saying awhile ago, so I came to Annabel, and together we straightened it out."

"Now, Euphemia, my dear, this will, of course, make a change in our plans, but Annabel's aunt needs a companion and housekeeper, and it is a very delightful and pleasant position and she is fond of you, so you can consider that. Or if you prefer something else, why, I can settle an income upon you, I'm telling you this over the telephone so that you can get used to the idea before I get home. Did I hear you say that, Euphemia?" he ended.

Euphemia hadn't anticipated anything of the sort, and she stood with what grace she could muster at short notice.

"And you can add my love to Annabel," said Euphemia tearfully. "By the way, where is she?"

"Right here—in my arms" was Benjamin's astonishing reply.

To her own surprise Euphemia smiled at the notion, and, smiling, something hard melted in her heart, and when she repeated her good wishes there was a strong note of sincerity in her tones.

Brierwood Roots.

Algeria is probably the only country which in clearing its land of brushwood at the same time finds a valuable commercial commodity in the roots of that same brushwood and simultaneously removes a menace to the forests which otherwise could only be removed at great expense. The roots of the bruyere, or white heather bush (Erica arborea), are utilized for pipes, and Algeria ships yearly about $100,000 worth of this material, known as brierwood, to this country. The roots are cut into the rough forms of tobacco pipes, called "ebouchons" in French. To produce the required quantity an immense tonnage of roots is required, because very often, owing to cracks and other faults, only one rough pipe is found in a fair sized root. The industry can, however, only be carried on where water is plentiful, as it is necessary to keep the roots thoroughly damp from the moment they are drawn from the soil until they are cut into the rough forms and boiled.—Argonaut

The Regina Pneumatic Sweeper is as easy to handle as an ordinary carpet sweeper, but vastly more efficient. It cleans by suction, gets not only the surface dirt, but also the fine dust imbedded in the fabric, and collects this dust in a bag instead of scattering it.

In construction it is both simple and substantial. It is used in exactly the same manner as a carpet sweeper. The suction is produced by duplex bellows, which are operated rapidly by the turning of the rubber-tired wheels as the sweeper is moved across the floor.

It Is to Laugh.

"Human nature is a strange thing," says the man with the aptitude for uttering platitudes. "Now the things that amuse me do not amuse you at all." "Quite true," replies his friend. "But there are compensations. Now, it amuses me to see that you are amused by the things that amuse you."—Judge.

Daily Thought.

He who shall pass judgment on the records of our life is the same that doomed us to frailty.—Stevenson.

(By La Rondeau.)
It would seem that flowers were the last word in trimming the very smart hats. Even a single bud placed here or there on the hat is not severely simple. The trimmed panama is shown in many attractive ways. Very often the shapes that would ordinarily be considered sport wear is trimmed in a most attractive manner. Above is a hat trimmed with the upper brim and part of the crown being covered with bright printed cotton. At four points a bright flower adds to the attractive detail.

me for a moment. It wouldn't deceive Annabel Moore, either."

Benjamin crimsoned like a pearly, and his clinched hand showed a tendency to thump the table.

"Perhaps I am not trying to deceive any one," said Benjamin in a strained voice when Nora had come and gone.

"Then why don't you be open and honest about it? Brush your hair back from your forehead and let the world see the bald spot which every one knows is there. I call it masquerading to—"

Benjamin Dacey forgot that he was a gentleman and spoke rudely to his pagging stepister.

"I will brush my hair as you suggest, Euphemia, provided that you will remove the undeniable false teeth from your mouth and cease to deceive the world concerning those charms. I beg you will excuse me. I will lunch downtown."

While Euphemia watched him in cold and silent anger, Benjamin went into the hall, clapped his new panama hat on his youthful looking head and went downtown.

Euphemia Fleming was a selfish woman, cold and harsh by nature. Benjamin had been very good to her since the death of his father's second wife, and because he had promised to care for Euphemia, who was quite without means of her own, he had placed her at the head of his modest bachelor household. But the arrangement was not entirely satisfactory to Benjamin, for while by little his stepister be-

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTING LETTER

(By Frank G. Menke.)

New York, Feb. 21.—How was it, you ask, that Harry F. Sinclair secured control of about 30 of the brightest stars in the Federal League and was permitted to sell them to the highest bidder and pocket the proceeds?

The answer is simple. Sinclair purchased Lee Magee and Benny Kauff and several stars from the Brookfield owners late last summer, for the purpose of putting them in the 1916 lineup of the team which the Feds planned to place in New York city and which Sinclair was to back. When the Feds were eliminated from the baseball world Sinclair no longer had any place to play those Brookfields and so he did the only natural thing—he sold them.

Sinclair took the other players from the Kansas City, Buffalo and other clubs in payment for money which he loaned to those clubs during the 1915 season. Sinclair has kept silent as to how he actually came into ownership of those players, merely because he saw no reason to make it known that some of the clubs were in such shape that he had to loan them money out of his private account.

Sinclair loaned $200,000. When peace was made in the baseball world it was found that Sinclair was about $200,000 in the "hole" through his advances of cash to the other Federal League clubs. Sinclair was willing to wipe clean the slate and charge the $200,000 to a "recreation" account, but the Sinclair debtors insisted that Sinclair take the pick of their players, pointing out that in selling them he would reimburse himself to a certain extent for his loans.

Sinclair accepted the players and then opened negotiations for their sale. Exclusive of what he has received for Kauff, Magee and the other Brooklyn players, Sinclair has realized less than $100,000 through his "auctioneering." When all the deals are closed, his total receipts will be in the neighborhood of $115,000, not figuring in the $60,000 he got for Kauff and Magee.

Stovall Spikes Canard. Recently one of the New York writers, whose chief amusement during the past two years has been found in "punning" the Feds, slipped a cable by printing a story about Sinclair which is declared "absolutely untrue" by the man whom it concerned—George Stovall.

The story was to the effect that Stovall is trying to get reimbursed for the $1,000 he paid as advance money when he signed Jimmy Johnson, the Pacific Coast outfielder. The story states that Sinclair received $5,000 from the sale of Johnson to the Brooklyn Dodgers and that Sinclair won't pay Stovall the $1,000 which "Stovall advanced out of his own pocket."

Stovall's own story covering that deal: "I was instructed to go to California and sign up Johnson, paying him $1,000 the moment he signed the contract. When I left for the coast I was told that $1,000 would be wired to my bank to be placed to my credit so as to take care of the check I was to issue to Johnson."

"When I signed up Johnson I gave him my personal check for $1,000. When I got back home I found that the $1,000 had been wired to my bank by Sinclair's agent, in keeping with the agreement, and that the money was deposited to my account two days before I issued the check against it."

Furthermore, we get it absolutely straight that Sinclair never got $5,000 from Charlie Ebbets for Johnson; that Sinclair turned over Johnson to Ebbets upon the sole condition that Ebbets reimburse him for the $1,000 advance money and also for the travelling expenses incurred in securing Johnson.

Another Fake Story. Another story by the same writer had it that "it is rumored" that the estate of Robert B. Ward is going to demand from Sinclair a part of the $60,000 he got through the sale of Lee Magee and Benny Kauff. The Ward family absolutely denies that it ever had such an intention. Here is

Walter S. Ward's explanation of the Kauff-Magee tangle: "We turned over both these players to Sinclair toward the end of the 1915 season for a consideration satisfactory to both parties. Sinclair was going to use them in his New York club. He had absolute ownership of those players from the moment that the deal with him was made, and he had absolute right to sell those players to any one and at any price he chose. Our claim to those players ceased—when we turned them over to Sinclair."

"Any story to the effect that we are going to try to get some of the $60,000 from Sinclair is nothing but a malicious misstatement."

HIGH SCHOOL TEAMS WIN

H. S. Girls, 32; Saugerties Girls, 6. Saturday afternoon the basketball team of the Girls' Athletic Association entertained five sturdy maidens from Saugerties, and before the latter returned to their own home town they were presented with the usual guest token given by the maroon and white. That is a defeat, Kingston having 32 points and Saugerties 6.

Although these fair representatives of the Saugerties school lost, still they received the benefit of that Christian doctrine, "return good for evil," for it will be remembered that the only athletic defeat our high school has suffered so far since September was received when our boys played Saugerties three weeks ago, and on that occasion there was much criticism regarding the judging of the Saugerties referee, so that it is quite natural that the Saugerties girls were surprised when not a single foul was called on them last Saturday afternoon, and when several were called by the referee, who was from this city, on our own team.

It is fortunate that the Girls' team are thrifty in the matter of their finances, for the support they continue to get from the student body is undeniably rotten.

During the game Miss Wood and Miss Weber were put in the game and the line up was as follows:

H. S. Midgets, 23; Poughkeepsie Juniors, 16. While their big sisters were battling with the Amazons from the neighboring town on the north, the Midgets were waging offensive warfare with youngsters in the Bridge City on the south.

When the Midgets reached Poughkeepsie their appetites were far out of proportion to the size of their bodies. Therefore they were easily led on by the arts of their rivals and succumbed to the harmless pleasure of an appealing luncheon counter.

After their hunger had been more than relieved they went on the floor, confident of easy success. But alas, the pie they had under their belts said "not so fast," and the sandwiches advised them to rest up a bit, so that when the game was already three-quarters over Poughkeepsie was in the lead, and the little gets were uncomfortable in mind and body.

But the pie relented and the Midgets won. Therefore, let this be a little lesson to all the high school teams showing the self confidence and assurance must have their limits.

The Midgets' game was staged before a game between the Poughkeepsie varsity and Albany high, which was won by the Bridge City five by the score of 16 to 6.
